A DEEP LAID PLOT.

New York Grocery Clerks Engaged in Thieving.

One of the Most Systematic Robbing Schemes on Record—Discovery and Arrest of the Leaders—The A. B. C. Union was Very Expensive for the Retail Grocers.

By Telegraph to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, December 5.—A widespread conspiracy to fleece the retail grocers of this city, mention of which was made in these columns yesterday, was checked by the arrest of several of the conspirators during the day, but not until the grocers had been victimized out of nearly $20,000. The prisoners, so far as arraigned before Justice Power in the Yorkville Police Court yesterday, were Christian Krooz, a milk man of Harlem, who is alleged to be the chief conspirator; Joe Faste, aged 20 years, clerk for A. Poppenhousen, a grocer at No. 899 Second avenue; Henry Precht, 21 years of age, clerk for L. Anderson, No. 810 Second avenue, and Herman Feitjer. 18 years of age, clerk for Henry Fullel at No. 823 Second avenue. Other. arrests are looked for to-day. The judicial examination was set down for 3 o'clock this afternoon. Krooz was bailed out by his brother in $600, and Teitzer was released on his parole, as it was his confession that discovered the plot. He is to be used as State's evidence. The other persons were remanded to jail.

THE STORY OF THE CONSPIRACY, which has existed for nine months, and from which, it is belived, very many retail grocers in the city have suffered, embraces the formation of a secret society known as the A. B. C. Union. The members were sworn to steal at least $125 a month from their employers, for which they were to receive in case of sickness $2 a day for each member in the union, and at the end of the year, if they desired to embark in business on their own account, $3,500 was to be given them from the general fund. The Retail Grocers' Association, learning of the conspiracy, took charge of the prosecution in the interest of trade, with Judge Strekler and Charles Strekler as their counsel. At the attorneys' office, yesterday afternoon, Mr. Chas. F. Bussing, president of the Grocers' Association, in detailing the circumstances, said: "Mr. Fuller has two clerks. his nephew, Diedrich Meyer, and Tietzer. For some time he observed that his stock decreased,

WHILE HIS BILLS INCREASED.

and his receipts remained the same. His suspicions were aroused against his nephew and he discovered that the young man had stolen $477 75 and given it to a neighbor named Henry Boehan. Messrs. A. and C. Strekler, as Mr. Fuller's attorneys, began suit on November 19, against Boehan in the city court for the recovery of this money, and the suit is still pending. Meyer finding his peculations discovered, confessed that during the month of October he was asked to join the A. B. C. Union, and that Teitzer was a member of it. He declared that Krooz, when he delivered milk to the grocers, solicited the clerks to join, and collected the money they stole daily. Out of the $125 received from each clerk Krooz kept and deposited the $100 to the credit of the general fund in the bank. He further said that one Precht was secretary, and that the Union, which embraced about twenty-five members, met every two weeks on a Sunday afternoon in rooms near Mr. Anderson's store. The latter, who is a single man, was usually absent, leaving Precht in full charge. At Krooz's invitation Meyer attended the meeting on Sunday, October 21, and saw Krooz collect about $700 from the half a dozen members who were present. Krooz said that he had between $12,000 and $13,000 in the bank, but he did not mention the name of the bank. He also said that he wanted some one who wrote a good hand to make out the checks. Meyer's hand-writing was the best, and Krooz offered him $500 a year

TO ACT AS SECRETARY,

if he would join the A B C's. Meyer declined, and kept the matter a secret until his private stealing was bought to light. When he accused Teitzen, the latter at once confessed, and showed a list containing the amounts he had given to Krooz. They vary from $4 to $10 a day, and make a total of $500. Teitzen further stated that at the meetings each clerk reported the financial condition of his employer and how much longer the latter would be able to stand the drain on his cash box. Clerks were advised to change their positions if they saw that the cash was running too low. Arrangements were also being made to buy out through third parties grocery stores that had a good locality, but whose owners had been brought to the verge of ruin by the systematic thefts of clerks. Teitzen made his confession on Sunday night. Yesterday morning when Krooz arrived to deliver his milk," continued Mr. Bussing, "Mr. Fuller charged him with

RECEIVING THE STOLEN MONEY.

He denied it in an indifferent way and tried to pass it off as a joke. During the day, however, he visited all the members of the A. B. C. Union and advised them to keep quiet. Fuller, who is a member of our organization, visited me, as its president, for advice. We obtained from Teitzen a full list of the members, and Judge Power issued warrants for their arrest. The warrants were placed in the hands of Detectives Shelly and McGown. Between 7 and 8 o'clock last night the detectives arrested Krooz on the street in front of his house. When taken into custody he said, 'Its lucky you've got me now or else you couldn't have found me.' While this arrest was being made Mr. Fuller and I to come to Fuller's store and told Meyer to see Precht while his employer, Mr. Anderson, was away. Meyer did so and told Precht that he had $150, which he wanted to give him as secretary of the A. B. C.'s. Precht refused to take it, saying, 'I've destroyed all the books: I've burned them up. I hear there's going to be trouble. I won't take any money until it blows over.' Shortly after that Precht and Fast were arrested by the detectives." The accused men deny their guilt, but refuse to make any further statement.

SENT WORD FOR ANDERSON

FASHION CAUSED IT.

A Change of Fashion Causes a Silk Manufacturing Firm to Collapse.

By Telegraph to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, December 5.—Solomon M. Meyenberg and his son, Max Meyenberg, composing the firm of S. M. Meyenberg & Co., manufacturers of silk at No. 72 Leonard street and at Hoboken, made an assignment yesterday to Nathaniel Meyers, of the law firm of Stern & Meyers, No. 18 Wall street. The assignment is without preferences, and includes the factory property on Grand and Clinton streets, Hoboken. The business has been established nearly ten years, and the firm employed about 400 people. The senior partner, Solomon M. Meyenberg, was formerly of M. Prall & Co., who failed about ten years ago and compromised. They dissolved, and Mr. Meyenberg began alone with $10,000 given him by his wife, and was very successful until recently. For some months past the banks, it is said,

REFUSED FURTHER DISCOUNTS.

Six weeks ago they placed a mortgage of $65,000 on their real estate to secure advances which hurt their credit. Their statement of their condition on January 1, 1883, showed assets $477,741; liabilities, $295,812; surplus $181,929. Their liabilities now are about $300,000. Mr. Meyers, the assignee, said yesterday that they had a capital on January 1, of over $175,000; early in the year certain lines of fancy goods went out of fashion, and they had to change the machinery. Their aggregate sales have realized a net loss of some thousands of dollars, to which is to be added the entire expenses of running the business. They now have a nominal surplus of between $40,000 and $50,000. They owe to banks and for merchandise about $175,000.

THEY ALSO OWE

about $75,000 advanced to them by their commission merchants on goods of the value of over $100,000 still unsold, so that the commission merchants are amply secured. Their mill and machinery are worth about $175,000, and are mortgaged for $77,000. They have about $50,000 worth of merchandise in the mill. They owe only about one-half of what they generally owed at this time of the year. They have made steady payments in reduction of liabilities, having paid off over $125,000 in the last four months, without making corresponding purchases. It is thought that a favorable settlement will be speedily made.

Indications.

WASHINGTON, D. C., December 5.—For the South Atlantic States, slightly warmer and partly cloudy weather, occasional light rains, variable winds and lower barometer. For the Gulf States, generally cloudy weather, local rain, winds mostly from east to south, slight rise in temperature and lower barometer. For the Tennessee and Ohio Valley, partly cloudy weather, local rains, variable winds shifting to north and east, nearly stationary temperature, rising followed by falling barometer. For the Lake Regions, slightly cooler and generally fair weather, northwesterly winds, rising barometer, followed in the Upper Lake Region by falling barometer and winds shifting to southerly. For the Upper Mississippi and Missouri Valley, fair weather, variable winds, followed by falling barometer, slight rise in temperature, and in southern portions local rains,

MR. ARTHUR'S DOCUMENT.

What the New York Papers Say About the Message.

By Telegraph to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, December 5.—The WORLD says: "On the whole the message is an interesting document, containing some evidences of independence, some suggestions of which we can approve, and some that we condemn. It will repay perusal."

THE TRIBUNE.

The Tribune says: "President Arthur's message is a straightforward and business-like document. The digests of the department reports, of which it is largely composed, are clear and satisfactory. The recommendations and suggestions as a rule, are sensible and well digested. In no sense a great message, it is nevertheless well calculated to produce an excellent impression on the country."

THE SUN.

The Sun says: "The document sent to Congress yesterday afternoon contains much evidence that the President thinks for himself. His opinion and reccomendations on important questions of policy are often wholly different from those which he transmits in the reports of his cabinet advisors. He conveys from the departments without expressed or impaired approval some schemes with which we should be sorry to find him in agreement. His assent to measures which meet his own views is sufficiently distinct. His silence in regard to other measures proposed by the members of his Cabinet, so far from meaning consent, is quite as energetic as the most energetic phase of disapproval."

THE TIMES.

The Times says: "The annual message of the President exhibits a calm tone and a moderate temper throughout. While it contains no marks of profound statesmanship, it is a business-like document, and, in the main, all that the occasion calls for."

THE HERALD.

The Herald says: "President Arthur's annual message has that character of plain and practical good sense which all his State papers have borne, and, while we do not approve of all his recommendations, and, indeed, dissent strongly from some of the most important of them, we cannot too highly praise the spirit of the document."

The Last of Gov. Sprague's Property.

By Telegraph to the Post-Dispatch.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., December 5.—In accordance with the decree of Judge Stivers, ex-Gov. Wm. Sprague yesterday noon made a surrender of the Quidneck Company's real and personal property to Claudius B. Farnsworth, the custodian of the estate. Prior to leaving the Quidneck Mills, Gov. Sprague caused to be removed about 800 pieces of print which had been made on account of a contract with the Messrs. Green, calico printers, also fourteen bales of cotton which were in the mill, and which belonged to, or at least were claimed by, the New York and New England Railroad Company. Gov. Sprague and Col. Amasa Sprague waited until 12:45 o'clock to see Mr. Farnsworth, but for some cause he remained at the Arctic until after the train bearing the Messrs. Sprague had left for Providence. A deputy sheriff arrived in Quidneck on Monday night, and forbade Superintendent Congdon from the mill or premises. Mr. Congdon replied that if the gentleman had any protests to offer he could go down to the mill office and see Gov. Sprague. The deputy refused to enter the premises then and could not be prevailed upon to go to the office this morning. There was quite a large crowd of persons about the depot and mill yard gates. They seemed to sympathize deeply with the Spragues, as the latter, after locking the mill doors behind them, quietly walked out of the yard. The Messrs. Sprague took the situation coolly and did not fret about it. Gov. Sprague's friends are loud in their praise of the good sense he has manifested in quietly yielding to the mandates of the court. At one time it was feared he would try to carry out his threat to forcibly retain possession of the Quidneck property, but better councils have prevailed. It is the belief that his fight is nearing the end.

TO REMOVE ANYTHING

The Trial of the Conspiracy Case To-Day.

All the Evidence For the State In—A Brilliant Speech for the Defense by Chester Krum—The Court Asked to Instruct the Jury to Acquit.

At the afternoon session of the conspiracy case yesterday, John W. Campbell, Chief of Police, was called. After some few questions, Campbell went on to explain what he meant by saying that he was sorry about the way he had talked to Caruth. He said that when Kerwin had accused him by saying that the Board was a set of political bummers, and that the resignations of all the members was held by outside parties, he went down to Caruth, and in conversation about this matter stated that the man who had accused him as above described was a coward and a liar and that he would face him anywhere. He used some profanity with the words coward and liar. He afterwards said to Faulkner that he was sorry that he had talked so roughly in Mrs. Caruth's presence. Campbell swore that he had never said he would cut Kerwin's —— out, and drag them around the street. He had not made that threat about Butler either, but he had said that the trouble was enough to make him cut somebody's —— out. He next detailed his conversation with Dr. Lutz, on the evening that the Board had removed him. He told Lutz he admitted, on the steps of the Four Courts, that he would get even with him, if he waited until his hair was as white as the driven snow. "And I will," said the Chief; "he tried to down me, and I'll return the compliment. I told him so, and I will." He further admitted that in this talk with Lutz, he said to the latter, "I'll leave you now before I knife you," and he confessed that he thought a knife would have been a very handy weapon at that moment. After a few questions about his connection with the preparation of the case, which elicited nothing of importance, Campbell was excused, and H. D. Cleveland, ex-Police Commissioner, took his place. He testified that the first men who suggested to him that he become a Commissioner were Messrs. Butler, Lutz and Caruth, who called together at his residence one night about six weeks before he was appointed. First, he told the two that he did not want the place. They replied he was the best man for it. He then relented and consented, under the condition that he should not be required to make a personal application. Next day, by appointment, he met the gentlemen again at Wm. H. Swift's office on Pine street. Then a draft of a letter to be addressed and sent to the Governor was agreed upon. Butler said he could get the Circuit Judges to indorse the application. After witness was appointed Caruth told him that Campbell was disrespectful and insubordinate, and that he must go. He made no promises to Lutz and Caruth to vote against Campbell, but conversations with them impressed him strongly. Before the meeting at which Campbell was removed, there was no agreement that Taaffe should be his successor, but the previous evening Lutz and Caruth mentioned Taaffe for the place.

Mr. Cleveland stated that at one time, he had agreed to vote for a reconsideration of the motion by which Campbell was suspended, because such a course would tend to allay public excitement. Mr. Cleveland was briefly cross-examined by Mr. C. M. Napton.

Officer Conrad Boland and Detective John A. Hobbs next testified that there was gambling at Arthur Lyon's and other places, when court adjourned to 11 a. m. to-day.

Proceedings were resumed in the big conspiracy case

AT 11:10 O'CLOCK THIS MORNING.

The crowd in the Court was small, and there was little interest manifested. The defendants and all the attorneys in the case were present early. The jury were very prompt in attendance. After the jurors had been polled there was a wait, and Messrs. Lodge, Bliss and Kent, the attorneys for the State, held a whispered consultation within the bar. After the talk, Mr. Lodge said: "If your honor please, we have sent for a witness. He will be here in a few minutes."

Another wait ensued. Judge Noonan read the paper, and the persons inside the bar indulged in chat: 'In five minutes, Mr. Lodge arose and said: "Under the rulings of your honor, the State here rests its case."

here arose and said, "If your honor please, we ask you to give the following instructions to the jury. Under the evidence introduced by the State, the Court orders the jury to acquit all the defendants." In support of this position Judge Krum spoke as follows:

If the court please. The case of the prosecution being now closed in behalf of the defendants, I beg leave to submit an instruction to the jury to acquit all of the defendants. In trespassing upon the indulgence of the court while presenting the grounds upon which this instruction is based, it not be deemed impertinent to suggest that if the facts established by the testimony do not come up to the extravagant generalities of the indictment (as was said upon the memorable occasion by the greatest of American lawyers), it will not be the first time in the history of public affairs when the results of the war have not quite come up to the lofty and sounding phrase of the manifesto. It will not be deemed impertinent to suggest also that upon the side of the defendants in this case the onslaught by the prosecution was viewed, perhaps, with some degree of apprehension. We had anticipated from the delicately chiseled lips of our brother, Kent, in opening the case to the jury, a blast from boreal regions calculated to pierce and congeal the defendants to the very marrow of their bones. But, if the court please, much to our agreeable disappointment, his utterances were as soft as that gentle zephyr that kissed the trees, and they did make no noise when Troilus climbed the Trojan walls and sighed his soul toward the Grecian tents where Cressid lay that night. The persuasive voice of our distinctive brother had even then a "dying fall." "It came over our ears like the sweet south that breathes upon a bank of violets stealing and giving odors." And such has been characteristic of the conduct and demeanor of all the learned brethren who have been retained to represent the State in this case. Possibly the scarcity of facts at the command of the prosecution has had something to do with the mildness of their conduct. It has been mild rather than suggestive of treason, stratagem and spoils; neither of our brethren has been leonine in his roarings, but rather has cooed as softly and as gently as a "sucking dove." Now, may it please the Court, that I have at least placed myself upon the basis of fraternal feeling with my brethren upon the other side, I beg to inquire what the facts are which have been established in support of the extraordinary generalities of this indictment. The defendant stands charged with having conspired to obstruct the due administration of the laws in relation of the setting up and keeping of gambling devices; to obstruct the due administration of the laws in respect to lotteries and gift enterprises; and, furthermore, to obstruct the due administration of what is so definitely and clearly described in the indictment as Chapter 6 of the Revised Statutes, in relation to the police of the City of St. Louis. The witnesses who have been examined in support of the indictment have been few in number, and the facts established by their testimony have been quite as scarce as even the limited number of the witnesses themselves.

STARTING WITH MR. KINKEAD, the prosecution demonstrated at the very threshold of their case, as far as concerns that branch of the indictment in regard to the obstruction of laws in relation to keeping and setting up gambling devices is concerned, that there was no occasion at any time covered by the period of the conspiracy for the administration and enforcement of any of the laws of this State in regard to gambling in the city of St. Louis.

The testimony of Mr. Kinkead is explicit to the effect that gambling as such absolutely ceased during the lifetime of the Police Board known as the Simmons and Maxon Combination. Outside of this one fact nothing fell from the lips of Mr. Kinkead which is material in any respect to a single aspect of the controversy before this jury. It is true that he did testify concerning a conference held in the sick room of Mr. Carruth, one of the defendants, at which members of the Police Board, including Mr. Kinkead, heard suggestions from defendants, who were not members of the Board, in regard to changes in the police force; but in that regard the entire testimony of Mr. Kinkead establishes the fact that those individuals who were dropped from the police force at that time were properly dropped because of the inability of the Board to retain them in the service, in view of the insufficiency of the appropriation at the disposal of the Board, and his testimony demonstrates conclusively that considerations of what have been denominated as politics in this case, prompted by a combination to run things, as Brother Lodge terms it, did not influence the Board in any respect whatever. They merely obtained from the proper officers of police a report covering the names of those patrolmen whose services could be best dispensed with, because of their inefficiency: and the sole consideration which moved them in making the changes was that of dropping from the force those members who could be most easily spared.

There is no law, if the Court please, which forbids Police Commissioners of the city of St. Louis from consulting whom they please in regard to action proposed at the hands of the Board, and no charge of a conspiracy to obstruct the due administration of the laws, with reference to the police force, can be established by merely showing that the members of the Board in taking the action complained of, discharge anything but their official, sworn duty under the law.

So the testimony of Mr. Faulkner demonstrates that the subject matter of the controversy in regard to him was limited merely to an effort on the part of Mr. Kinkead to secure his removal, which was met with persistent and successful opposition at the hands of his brother members of the Board and of those defendants in the indictment who did not happen to hold official positions, but who were consulted upon the subject, or who knew what the purpose was on the part of Kinkead in regard to this employment of the police force.

I CHALLENGE

the utmost ingenuity of the part of the gentlemen representing the prosecution in this cause to demonstrate from the testimony of Mr. Faulkner any combination on the part of these defendants which tended in the slightest degree whatever to obstruct the due administration of any of the laws in relation to the police of the city of St. Louis. He has and always has been, according to his own testimony, the object of assaults at the hands of interested individuals, and all that has been shown by his testimony is that, knowing him to be a competent and proper employe, these defendants resolutely put themselves in the path of every effort on the part of such interested individuals to secure his displacement. Their conduct in this regard, instead of being reprehensible, is conclusively shown to have been such as to necessarily meet the approval of every well-thinking member of this community. And I submit that the attempt to give undue importance to a keeper of a livery stable under the police force for the purposes of this case amounts to nothing more or less than the merest travesty upon all notions of criminal procedure. And it is only in keeping with the unmitigated failure of this prosecution, from the beginning to the end of their case, that, so far, from Mr. Faulkner's testimony has been established one damaging fact against the defendants; the words which have fallen from his lips have been nothing more nor less than a boomerang against the prosecution itself. For he, the admitted friend and champion of Campbell, Chief of Police, himself has struck down and demolished the ideal which the prosecution have sought to set up before this community for the worship and veneration of all of those individuals, who, instead of taking, as they ought to do, an active interest in the local politics of St. Louis, have seen fit to stay at home and make faces at those who, in season and out of season, have been the recognized adherents to party purposes, and who have thereby themselves merely discharged the duty and privileges of citizenship which are credited to them by every established principle upon which rests the whole theory of the Government of our country and the administration of its laws. For, whether the statements of Campbell to Faulkner are to be regarded in a serious or a frivolous light, the fact remains established by the testimony of this witness that John W. Campbell, Chief of Police, was himself guilty of entertaining and submitting to the Board of Police, to whom he owed his appointment and to whom his primary obligation was due as an officer of this State, that which, under the express letter of the statute, as I expect to demonstrate before I leave this subject, was nothing more nor less than a bribe, by means of which to secure his own appointment to an office, which, while it happened to be lower in degree, perhaps, than the office which he then held, was none the less a public office involving the discharge of functions as well to the city as to the State. It is true that Faulkner has detailed conversations held with certain of the defendants under this indictment, but, may it please the court, those conversations can only be accepted in the light of the establishment of a conspiracy to defeat the operation of the public laws of this State when it becomes the settled rule that to be a Democrat in politics or to be a Democrat in politics shall constitute a flagrant violation of the laws and calculated to work a subversion of every well conceived notion of order or jurisprudence. In this connection, if the court please, I desire to call attention to Section 1,470, of the Revised Statutes, as bearing upon the precise point in the

which is material to the inquired before the court; "Every person who shall directly or indirectly, give or engage to give any sum of money or other valuable consideration, gratuity or reward, to any officer as with intent to influence or induce such officer to give or procure for him or any other base act, interest, influence, or other means whatever, any appointment, office or place of trust, or any preferment or emolument, or assist by any means whatsoever to procure the same; or, second, in consideration of any office or appointment or emolument, at interest or or influence, or any aid or assistance in procuring, or attempting to procure such appointment, office or place of trust, or any emoluments, shall, upon conviction, be adjudged guilty of bribery and punished by imprisonment in the penitentiary for a term not exceeding seven years." And, may it please the court, in the light of the testimony of Mr. Faulkner, if it be conceded that all of these defendants did combine to secure the removal of Campbell from the office of Chief of Police, how can they be said to have combined to obstruct the due administration of the laws concerning police, when this witness has established that John W. Campbell offered the sum of $300 to the Board of Police if they would change him from the office of Chief of Police to that of Captain which he held at the time when he received his appointment as Chief. It would be remembered that the offer of Campbell was not only that he would give this sum of money to the Board of Police if they would appoint him to the office which he sought, but he proposed to turn over that money to them to be disposed of by them in any manner which to them might seem fair or proper. I do not care, as I said before, whether this proposition is to be regarded in a serious or frivolous light in the hands of those who represent this prosecution. The fact is that the offer was made; the fact is that the Chief of Police did make this proposition to the Police Board, and thereby brought himself clearly and fully within the express denunciation of this section of the statute to which I have called the attention of the Court.

Leaving now the testimony of Kinkead and Faulkner, and I submit that I have selected from that testimony the salient facts established by it, we come to the testimony of Vogel himself. He demonstrates that he was not interfered with in any respect. He was not hampered with any improper restrictions. The sole case of gambling which is shown to have occurred during the whole period covered by this indictment was investigated and put an end to by Campbell himself, without any interference at the hands of any one of these defendants, whether connected or not connected with the Board of Police. Arthur Lyon's establishment, according to the testimony in this case, was run for the magnificent period of one day. His business was put an end to by the Chief of Police himself. And there is not a word of testimony from the lips of this witness, upon which can be based the charge of combination on the part of those defendants to obstruct any of the laws covered by the indictment. The statement made by the defendant, McEntire, to the Chief of Police, which appears to have taken place in the fall of 1882, stands absolutely without any significance whatever. As far as the testimony in this case is concerned, there is not a word to show that at that time Mr. McEntire even knew a single one of his co-defendants and it certainly does not appear that at that time he had any purpose in common with them or was acting with them in any respect or in any regard whatever. As far as the removal of the Chief is concerned, it is still an open question in this State whether that removal was rightful or in violation of law. It does appear affirmatively that the Police Board were advised that it was their right under the law to effect the removal of the Chief of Police without the preferment of charges, without notice and without a hearing. It remains yet to be settled by the court of last resort whether that view and construction of the statutes was proper or erroneous. Now, if the court please, it is undoubtedly the burden of the complaint on the part of the prosecution that the

as Chief of Police was the result of a common understanding between all of these defendants. Yet in what respect does such an understanding constitute a combination to obstruct the due administration of the laws concerning the Police Courts of the city of St. Louis. It is proved by the testimony of Mr. Cleveland that upon his own appointment to the Police Board his fellow-members complained of insubordination and improper conduct on the part of the Chief. It has been proven by this testimony that it was upon that ground that his removal was sought by the defendants in this case. And, if the court please, when he was removed by whom was he succeeded? Was it by one qualified to discharge the duties of the office? Was it by one acting in the interest of any combination of gamblers? Was it by one who represented any combination of parties interested in gift enterprises or lotteries? No, sir. The successor of the Chief of Police, according to testimony in the case, was just as well qualified to discharge the functions of the office as any other individual within the range of appointment at the hands of the Board of Police. And I undertake to say here, in view of all insinuations in this case (and it was made up altogether of insinuations) that had not the Board taken the action which they did concerning the then Chief of Police not one of them would have been worthy of any esteem or any confidence at the hands of any of his fellow-citizens. Consider, may the court please, what the testimony in this case established, the Chief of Police who has been guilty of offering a bribe to the Board of Police, a Chief of Police who, not believing the story in regard to blank resignations of members of the Police Board, yet retails such story for the purposes of publication; a Chief of Police, who, by reason of rapidity of promotion, had become so far inflated with his own self-importance as to imagine that the sum and substance of every police regulation, of every provision by law concerning the police force, centered and have its exposition in himself. Such, may it please the court, is shown to have been the situation of the Chief of Police with respect to the Board of Police. The creature had grown to be greater than the creator, and it was upon that ground and upon the ground of his insincerity, his positive insubordination that his removal was effected at the hands of the board. I say nothing concerning the manifest interest of this witness in this prosecution. I am content to leave him where he has put himself. I say that this testimony establishes nothing whatever adverse to a single one of the defendants. He confesses and intents and absorbing interest in the result of this controversy. But notwithstanding this bias, notwithstanding his express determination to accomplish the downfall of one of these defendants, he has yet been utterly unable to establish a single fact inimical to anyone of the defendants whether such defendants stands before the court and jury in a public or in a private capacity. John W. Campbell the principal witness for the prosecution has been held up before the court and jury as a preacher of magnificent proportions and but, whenever and wherever he has spoken in regard to a single material point in the case those proportions and those possibilities have been by himself demonstrated to be a mere gaseous distention of an inflated baloon.

We now come if the court please, to the testimony of Mr Cleveland, which seems to have been relied by the prosecution as the keystone of the case, I submit that his testimony instead of proving detrimental to the defendants, has brought about their entire exculpation. His appointment was sought to with references to some ulterior purpose, but to the end that there might be accord and harmony in the Board. Those interested in securing his appointment are shown not to have been limited to the narrow compass of these defendants.

Your Honor has observed that the individuals who were acting and primarily acted in securing the appointment of Mr. Cleveland are by his own testimony shown to have been as reputable and responsible men and citizens as can be found anywhere in this community. I should not deem it the worst exposition in the world in regard to my own purposes, touching a given subject matter, if it were proven that, associated with me for the accomplishment of that purpose were men of the recognized standing of Charles C. Maffitt, Erastus Wells and Mr. Harrington, the present efficient president of the present School Board of the City of St. Louis. It is well, if it please the Court, that the rulings of the Court, supported as they are by every well considered adjudication to be found in the books, has confined the anathemas of the prosecution within the narrow compass of the averments of this indictment, because otherwise it would be the province of this jury and the duty of this Court to determine whether Messrs. Maffitt, Wells and Harrington were not themselves engaged in an unlawful and improper combination to obstruct the due administration of the laws concerning the police when they dictated the letter of application for the appointment of Mr. Cleveland and urged that appointment on the Governor as being in every respect a correct and proper act to be done. And, may it please the Court, it will not be considered impertinent to the matter in controversy at this bar, for me to say here that there is not a more honorable or trustworthy man to be found in the community of the City of St. Louis than Henry W. Cleveland, who was himself virtually an appointee of a combination of individuals who, themselves, represent the most material interests of the city of St. Louis.

Recurring again to the inquiry before the Court, I respectfully submit that there is nothing established in this indictment further than the defendants were acquainted with each other, were members of the same political organization, and were acting in the local politics of the City of St. Louis

May it please the court, when it is held as an established principle of criminal jurisprudence that activity in politics constitutes a crime, it will then be time to bring those who are proven to be active in politics to the bar of criminal justice. For one I am not afraid of the consequences of public affairs, which may even be attributed to what is commonly known in politics as a machine. For me I am not afraid even of the application of the doctrine in politics that to the victors belong the spoils, and I shall be the last man in this community to lend my own approval to the doctrine that to be an active Democrat or to be an active Republican constitutes to be an offense under the laws of this or any other State within our common Union. On the contrary, as this, may it please the court, is nothing in the world but a controversy between two wings of a political organization, I beg to commend to the consideration of those gentlemen who have inaugurated this prosecution that, instead of complaining, instead of staying at home and relying upon their supposed superiority in some respect over the individuals who may criticise, and whom they may have punished, whether it would have been better in the past, whether it will not be better in the future, to visit the primaries occasionally themselves, upon some occasions to cast a doubt into the ballot-box, and once in a while, perhaps, to show some slight interest in the administration of local affairs, to the end that everybody may be represented and all proper and public interest be duly subserved. The place to settle controversies of this description is the place to settle differences of this description is not at the bar of the criminal tribunal. Accusations of this description can accomplish nothing further than to bring accusers themselves into disrepute. And, sir, in all seriousness in the name of all recognized principle of criminal jurisprudence and criminal procedure, I protest against the abuse of the powers of the law in a settlement of what can be regarded as nothing in the world but a local political difference based upon and growing out of the absolute and utter indifference of the very accusers themselves in regard to the public interests which they say have been neglected, have been subverted and abused.

Finally, may it please the court, looking back over the entire field covered by the testimony, where can be found one fact tending in the slightest degree toward the establishment of a criminal offense. There is no testimony tending to establish a combination of any description between these defendants. There is no testimony tending in the slightest degree to establish a common purpose looking toward the commission of an act in itself criminal, or toward the accomplishment by unlawful means of an act or result lawful in itself. It is not necessary to urge, in view of the well-known and well settled principles of the law of conspiracy, that these essential features must be found in the case of the prosecution before it can be said that there is any testimony tending in the slightest degree to sustain or approve the charge laid in this indictment the defendants are not shown to have had in view the accomplishment of an unlawful or criminal purpose. They are not shown to have confederated together for the accomplishment by unlawful means of that which in itself was a lawful act, therefore the charge of conspiracy falls to the ground.

Furthermore, where, in this case from one end to the other of the testimony which has been listened to here for the last week can be found a single fact upon which can be based the charge of a corrupt motive on the part of these defendants? Where is the testimony tending to show an unlawful and corrupt inducement extended from some source to these defendants to the end that they should lend to the accomplishment of an unlawful and improper result? What was it? What was the consideration that led to the creation of this conspiracy? Was it the expectation of political preferment on the part of these defendants. The testimony on the part of the State affords no information whatever in this regard. Was it the expectation of a pecuniary reward? Testimony on the part of the State sheds no light whatever upon the inquiry.

WHERE, THEN, WAS THE CRIMINAL MOTIVE?

Where, then, was the corrupt and unlawful intent, which, together with the unlawful act, must always combine to constitute a criminal offense? It was my privilege not may years ago to have been connected with both the successful and the unsuccessful offense of charges of conspiracy under the laws of the United States, where the facts establish demonstative the most serious consequences to the general Government by reason of the alleged unlawful acts and confirmations of those who were accused. It is a part of the necessary history of these causes that the burden of proof on the part of the Government all the way through was to establish and demonstrate a corrupt motive as the groundwork and basis of the entire accusation, and so here, unless it can be demonstrated to the exclusion of every other hypothesis that there was a corrupt motive on the part of these defendants, that there was an unlawful intent on the part of these defendants, combined with unlawful acts on their parts, there is nothing in the case from which it can be properly said they have been shown to have been guilty in any respect whatever of a combination to obstruct any of the laws mentioned or specified in this indictment.

May the Court please, I quote from a case of the People vs. Bennett, 49 N. Y. 144: "When I say the hypothesis of delinquency or guilt of the offense charged in the indictment should flow naturally from the facts proved and be consistent with them all the evidence must be such as to exclude every reasonable hypothesis that of guilt of the offense imputed to the defendant: or in other words the facts proved must all be sustained with and point to his guilt not only but they must be inconsistent with his innocence." I quote from the charge of Judge Dillon in the case of the United States vs. Babcock at page 621 of the third Dillon when I read, "If the evidence can be reconciled either with the theory of innocence or of guilt the law requires the jury to give the accused the benefit of a doubt and to adopt the former. The burden of proof does not shift in criminal cases, it is on the prosecution throughout to establish the defendant's guilt by the evidence, and in criminal cases the defendant cannot be called upon or produced in proof until the prosecution by the evidence actually produced establishes the defendant's guilt beyond a reasonable doubt."

These defendants, may it please the Court, have been brought to trial under an indictment which is reprobated by every respectable authority within the whole range of criminal jurisprudence. They have been brought to trial under an indictment which stands in palpable violation of the express decoration of the bill of rights of the Constitution of the State. There is nothing in indictment which advises them or has advised them of the offense which they are called upon to meet. There is nothing in this indictment which specifically indicates to them the nature and cause of the accusation. It is unnecessary to urge that there are no rights more sacred than those of a person accused of crime, and, sir, at the risk of irritating my brethren upon the other side by an allusion or reference to the indictment under which this traverse jury have been sworn, I beg to read from Bishop Criminal Procedure, section 517, as follows: "To the uninitiated it has sometimes seemed that when a man is arrested for crime, he knows of course what he has done, and so knows what the prosecuting power will undertake to prove against him. Hence it is inferred the rules of pleading accumulated by the wisdom of the past ought to be done away with, but, if this argument is sound, then we should go a step farther and dispense with the trials and the proofs; and, as the prisoner knows what he has done, he will not deem himself unjustly dealt with when shut up in prison, or sentenced to be hung. And as the community knows also this proceeding will have an excellent

At several parts of this speech Mr. Krum was interrupted by applause. At the close of the poetical exordium, for instance, the cheers were loud, and Judge Noonan ordered that anybody who repeated them should be brought before the bar. When he had closed Court adjourned until 2:30 p. m., because Mr. Lodge did not wish to begin until after recess.

Cutting the Ground Away.

When Campbell was testifying yesterday as to his visits to improper houses under orders from the Board to assure the inmates that no raid was contemplated, Mr. Glover was very persistent in his endeavors to get Campbell to swear whether or not he had been told by the Board to promise these people immunity. The Chief said he had not been told to do so; that he had not so testified before the Grand Jury, and that if his testimony so read it was incorrect.

"It was a side issue," said Mr. Glover to a POST-DISPATCH reporter, "and I went into it for the purpose of cutting the ground from under the feet of the late Grand Jury in their defense to the damage suit which Lutz and Caruth have brought against them. The Richeson Grand Jury in their report charged that the Board had compelled Campbell to go to these places and promise immunity to the inmates. Caruth and Lutz ask damages for the statement. I wanted to get Campbell on record on the matter. You see he will not sustain the Grand Jury. He says the statement is not true."

MEXICAN TRADE.

The Spanish-American Club's Efforts to Obtain it for St. Louis.

Merchants Invited to Attend a Meeting To-Night at the Club Rooms—Objects of the Meeting—The Opportunities Now Presented for an Encouragement of Trade

EL CLUB COMERCIAL HISPANO-AMERICANO, }
ST. LOUIS, December 3, 1883. }

DEAR SIR—It being the wish of the members of this club that it shall aid the merchants and manufacturers of St. Louis in creating and fostering commercial relations between the city of St. Louis and our neighboring republic of Mexico, a meeting will be held on Wednesday evening, December 5, at 8 p. m., in the club rooms, No. 919 Olive street, for the purpose of discussing the matter and devising some scheme for the furtherance of this object. You are earnestly requested to be present on this occasion and aid us with your counsel. Respectfully,

C. MARQUARD FORSTER, President.
J. L. CORRIGAN, Secretary.

Three hundred invitations similar to the foregoing were sent out last Monday to the leading merchants and manufacturers of this city. The object of the meeting to which the business men are invited is indicated in the invitation, but desirous of obtaining sufficient information on that subject to more generally interest them in this important matter of nursing, strengthening and maintaining the Mexican trade a POST-DISPATCH reporter called on Mr. Forster, the president of the club, this morning.

"We have sent out those invitations," said that gentleman, "to call the attention of the merchants of this city to the fact that we are desirous of securing for St. Louis all the Mexican trade we can possibly get. This trade, which amounted to little or nothing a year or two ago, is beginning to come in now. It don't amount to a great deal at present, but it is growing, and its future condition depends upon how our merchants deal with it. We have done a great deal to assist the merchants of the city in this matter, and now we want them to come and consult with us."

"What have you done?"

"The club has given them a detailed and compact account of the duties on imports and exports. We have a man at work every day visiting the hotels, on the alert for Mexican travelers. When he meets with a Mexican name on a hotel register he makes himself acquainted with its owner, ascertains his object in coming to St. Louis, takes him to the club-rooms, introduces him to the members, and if the visitor should be on a purchasing tour takes him to the stores where he can buy what he wants."

"Do all Mexican visitors purchase largely?"

"Very largely."

"What do they buy?"

"Furniture, saddlery, dry goods, agricultural implements, iron and machinery. Of course they vary a great deal at the retail stores—all sorts of things. But machinery is what they generally come here for."

"Where do the visitors come from?"

"Mostly from Chihuahua and the City of Mexico."

"What plan will be adopted to-night?"

"I don't know. We have been studying different plans, but we would rather hear the merchants before forming one."

"Does any of the trade get to Chicago?"

"We try not to let it pass St. Louis. We keep the Mexicans away, if possible."

JUDGE E. C. SMITH,

Treasurer of the Club, and the leading spirit in the present movement, said: "We want to counsel with the merchants and manufacturers of this city on the subject of Mexican trade. Now, I would like to have it distinctly understood that the Club is not a clique, or a ring, or a business scheme. Its aims are for the general good of St. Louis, and it invites everybody to attend this gathering called by it for to-night. Since the railroads have penetrated Mexico a large trade has come to the States from that country. Before the railroads were built into Mexico, the commercial houses of England and France caught all the Mexican trade. The United States is now cutting into that trade. We are much nearer Mexico than France or England, and can offer better inducements than they can. Why, just think: you can ride from here to Chihuahua in only a few days time, and before long you can get into a car here and ride clear to the City of Mexico. The Mexicans are very friendly to us. If we want any business facilities in that country we can get them for the asking. They pay cash and buy largely. Now, it strikes me that efforts should be made to secure and retain all the custom we can get. There are 150 members in the Spanish American Club. A large number of them are young men who have been industriously studying Spanish for some time and have succeeded in attaining considerable proficiency in the language. Some of these young men are employed in commercial houses where business is done with Mexicans, and their services are very valuable as mediums of communication."

"What do the Mexicans buy most of?"

"They are large purchasers of agricultural implements and mining machinery. They buy a great deal of furniture, also. Other than these lines of goods they purchase any quantity of miscellaneous articles."

"Do do expect a large attendance to-night?"

"I suppose there will be a large number of merchants there. I hope so. Generally at a meeting of that kind merchants are represented by a clerk or a salesman. I hope it will be otherwise to-night."

"Have you any plan outlined as yet?"

"No. We want the merchants to do that if they will."

The reporter called on Mr. Bailey, the cashier of Apsley & Hall's rubber-goods store. Both Mr. Bailey and Mr. Hall are in the directory of the Spanish-American club. Mr. Bailey repeated in substance what has been recorded above. Being questioned as to the extent of the trade of his house with Mexico he said that it was not large but was growing. "We sell rubber garments mostly, though we have been selling heavy goods—belting, etc. Although myself and Mr. Hall are identified with the club, I trust that it will not be thought that other rubber men should keep away. I would like to see Goodyear's and other houses represented at the meeting to-night."

That the Mexicans who come to St. Louis spend money liberally is known to all who come in contact with them. Mr. Bob Williamson, a fluent Spanish linguist, of the firm of Steer & Williamson, haberdashers, under the Southern Hotel, when asked about the matter, said that the Mexicans stopping at the Southern patronized the retail stores exclusively. "Every party that comes here leaves $150 to $200 at this store," said he. "They go in largely for expensive goods. They buy the finest underwear, handsomest dressing-gowns and smoking-jackets, shirts with embroidered fronts, fancy hosiery, etc." From all of which it may be seen that it would not be out of the way for all classes of business men to attend the meeting of the Spanish-American Club to-night.

WASHINGTON.

Mr. Carlisle Busy Making Up His Committees.

Chairmanships Characterized as Rare Plums—Mr. Morrison, of Illinois, to Have the Most Important Place—Congressman O'Neil Very Angry With the Clerk of the House—Congresional Proceedings.

By Telegraph to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 5.—The new Speaker is very busy with his committee work. Of course he gets plenty of advice from the press as to the suitability of this or that person for this or that office, but he does not see fit to take all the advice thus offered, or, indeed, any of it, for if he should begin to do so he would find himself in a very much muddled state before he had gotten a tenth of the way through the list. The task is, indeed, a serious one, and one in which he finds it difficult to ask advice, as every man is liable to be governed to some extent by prejudices, or to some personal or political ambitions, or in no other phase of life do these influences appear to be so far reaching and so intertwined with every motive. There are forty-three committees of the House, to say nothing of four or five "joint" committees of which the Senate furnishes a portion, and nearly a dozen special committees. These committees have from ten to fifteen members each, thus making seven or eight hundred places into which the 320 members must be crowded. Of course the chairmanship of the more important committees is, in each case, considered and flavor, and there are many applicants for the positions, or at least many who would like to get them. The make up of these committees has so powerful an influence on legislation, that the greatest care is required in selecting men suitable for the positions. A Speaker who has a particular line of policy to follow in regard to national or other topics, may by a proper make up of his committees so arrange that every bill of a nature antagonistic to his pet theories or schemes, if he has any, will be throttled at its birth, or rather before it is born. The power of the Speaker over legislation is most despotic. He makes up the committees of men favorable to any particular theory, or with even a majority of their members of such disposition, and the remainder of the House may introduce bills antagonistic to the views of the majority until they grow gray with age and the exercise of this privilege, and yet they cannot get action on them. Out of the ten thousand bills introduced in the last Congress not one-third, probably not one-fifth, ever got beyond the committees to which they were referred. This was not in every case, or in half the cases because of

A PLUM OF RARE VALUE

of the bills introduced, but because of the fact that the bills themselves were never reached in the regular order of procedure, or if reached, were only discussed and not acted on. The committee have rooms at the Capitol building, just across the corridor surrounding the House, and in those the committees meet at 10 or 11 o'clock in the morning, once, twice, or sometimes three or four times a week, for as each man must be on two or three committees, it is difficult for them to meet oftener than that. Their sessions usually occupy the forenoon, until noon, when the House meets, and all committees must close their labors, unless they are given special permission to sit during the session of the House, and that permission is not often asked.

The Committee on Ways and Means is considered by far the most important of the committees. It frames all tariff legislation before being presented for the action of the House, and to it all bills of that nature, and all bills relating to the general financial condition of the country are referred. Its duty is as indicated by the name, to look after the "ways and means" of providing the funds for the

SUPPORT OF THE GOVERNMENT.

In other words, it assumes the position ordinarily occupied by the husband in the family, of providing the "wherewithal" for the support of the family, while the position of wife is filled by the committee on appropriations, who spend the money. To be sure the duty of the latter committee is to make these appropriations just as light as they can consistently be, when the children of the household, the heads of the various departments, make known their wants, but is not that the duty of the wife as well. To be sure the amount which the thrifty housewife is called upon to expend in a year, is quite large, about four hundred millions, the total since the beginning of the Government having been eight and a half billions, but it does it as a rule quite conscientiously and with as much care as can be expected from one with so large a demand upon its resources and such a constant and generous income.

The Committee on Commerce is also considered a very important one, and to it are referred many very important subjects, such as affairs relating to railways and their rates, the improvement of the rivers and matters of this sort.

THE COMMITTEE ON ELECTIONS

acts on the contested claims for seats, taking testimony or hearing that which is offered by the contestants. After it reaches a decision it presents its reports to the House, and it acts on it, usually confirming it, but not always. Then there are the committees on judiciary, on mines and mining, on railways and canals, on the various departments of the Government, and so on, ad infinitum and ad nauseum. Many of these have little to do, except to have a clerk at six dollars a day during the session, though many of the others have more than they can possibly do.

It is in the making up of these committees that the Speaker is now at work. What the result will be of course nobody can tell with any degree of accuracy, for nobody knows, not even the Speaker himself, how they will be arranged. The changes and arrangements are kaleidescope. A single change may necessarily result in many more, and these many more will perhaps disarrange the whole slate, requiring a general readjustment. The Speaker must, in some cases, at least recognize the friendship of those who stood by him in his fight, by giving them commanding positions in which they can make reputations for themselves, and yet in so doing he must not forget the eyes of the public and the press are upon him, and that selections are subject to severe criticism if he makes errors.

For the chairmanship of the Ways and Means Committee, Mr. Morrison of Illinois is most talked of, and is pretty likely to be the man. He has been Carlisle's "right hand man" in the fight, and as he is known to entertain the same view on the tariff as the Speaker, he is pretty sure to be the man selected for the place. He held that position under Mr. Speaker Ker, having, it is said, only accepted it after a severe struggle with his sensitive disposition: for he had been a close friend of Mr. Ker, in the fight, and it was feared that the appointment would be looked upon as the result of a bargain before the fight began. Mr. Randall will probably get the chairmanship of the Appropriations Committee, for it is customary to compliment the defeated candidates with a good committee, and beside he an excellent man for the place. He will be given a good position, probably his old Committee of Foreign Affairs. The others are not yet fully decided upon. Guesses might be made, are being made every hour in fact, but they are only guesses.

O'Neill Angry With Clerk Clarke.

By Telegraph to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, D. C., December 5.—There is a very pretty fight brewing between Clerk Clarke and Congressman O'Neill. It appears that O'Neill desired a friend of his named Bowen, of St. Louis, to have a position under Clarke, and it was understood that he had the promise of the position for him. Now, since Clarke's election, O'Neill's friends state that affairs have changed, and that Clarke is not so sure that he can give him the position. Indeed, it is said Clarke has flatly refused the place, whereat O'Neill is a good deal disturbed, and expresses his opinion of Clarke in anything but complimentary terms.

New National Banks at Louisiana, Mo.

By Telegraph to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, December 5.—Two new national banks have organized at Louisiana, Mo., the Exchange National Bank and the National Bank of Commerce. There was a hot race between them which should get in first and get the name of the First National Bank of Louisiana, but as there was a difficulty in deciding which was entitled to it, Comptroller Knox decided not to give it to either.

Offices of the House.

By Telegraph to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, December 5.—The House officials held a meeting this morning and decided to distribute the offices to the States according to the number of members each State has in the House. It is understood that there will be less than one office for each member, and that Missouri's share will be ten or twelve. There have been thus far very few applicants for places from Missouri, though a number of aspirants are expected to arrive in a few days.

XLVIIITH CONGRESS.

The Senate.

WASHINGTON, D. C., December 5.—Mr. Hoar presented a joint resolution of the Legislature of Massachusetts opposing convict labor on the public works of the United States.

Mr. Blair presented a joint resolution of the Legislature of New Hampshire relating to forfeited land grants.

Mr. Butler introduced a bill to repeal the internal revenue laws, and to abolish the Internal Revenue Bureau.

Other bills were introduced as follows:

By Mr. Cullom—Indemnifying the Legislative power of Utah.

By Mr. Walker—Indemnifying Arkansas for swamp and overflowed lands sold by the United States since 1857; also for the erection of a Federal building at Fort Smith; to donate a part of the abandoned military reservation at Fort Smith for the benefit of the city of that place; also to adjust the claims of Arkansas against the United States.

The House.

WASHINGTON, December 5.—Mr. Randall objected to the passage of a resolution for the immediate appropriation of $25,000 for printing the records of the United States Supreme Court. Referred to the Committee on the Judiciary. All deficiencies should have a thorough investigation, not only by the House, but by the appropriate committee.

The Virginia contested election case of Garrison vs. Mayo was referred to the Committee on Elections, with instructions to the committee to report the legal questions involved thereon.

It was ordered that the House adjourn to-morrow to Monday.

Mr. Jones submitted the customary resolutions and announced the death of Thomas H. Herndon of Alabama, as a mark of respect for whom the House adjourned, with the understanding that no business be transacted.

Rev. Mr. Badley, a returned missionary from India, spoke last night to a large congregation in Dr. Hughey's Church.

Mr. L. F. Haskins of Hematite, Mo., and husband of Mrs. M. A. Haskins, principal of the Des Peres School, died at his home on Friday, the 30th ult.

The story is circulated that Mr. R. H. Robbins is dead. His wife received a letter written Sunday saying that he was better than he had been for years.

There were four cases for disturbing the peace this morning. Charles H. Hennen was dismissed. McWeeney was fined $10 and costs. James lynn was fined $25 and costs. Wm. Brophy dismissed.

Railroad Notes.

The Vandalia Line has just closed a contract with the Pittsburg Locomotive Works for ten new engines. Three of them will be extra large passenger service concerns, and will be used to pull the fast trains of that company. The remainder will be large "Consol" freighters. Besides this order there have been arrangements made to begin to receive at once 5,000 tons of steel rails. Col. J. Hill, general manager of the road, to whom credit is due for keeping up with all improvements, has decided to put full uniforms on s train crews. Navy blue, large brass buttons on at and vest and blue cap will constitute the tfit.

The Great West left this morning with the hicago and Alton officials on a tour of inspection ver the Western Division. Messrs. Chappell, oth, Mitchell, Bates, Reeves and others were of e party.

Pennsylvania Legislators.

HARRISBURG, December 5.—The Senate has adopted a resolution requesting the Federal authorities to restore to a safe condition the Erie harbor. The appropriation bill passed over the Governor's veto, has been signed and warrants for the salaries issued. Several Senators refused pay for the extra session; others refused pay for the eleven days' recess.

The Markets.

FORENOON SESSION, CLOSING AT 1 P. M.

Receipts at St. Paul continue to be heavy, the storage room being rapidly absorbed. At the rate at which the cereal is being pushed forward from the country, it will not be many days before all the room that can be allotted for wheat in the elevators will be completely filled. The amount already in store is 800,000 bu.—[St. Paul Pioneer Press.——C. A. King & Co. of Toledo give the following for the benefit of the unsophisticated in produce business. The remarks are worthy of a wide circulation: "Contracts for grain for future delivery are like any other contracts for goods to be delivered in the future. The actual delivery occurs as frequently as in any other trade. Over 20,000,000 of the present visible supply of wheat is of the speculative grades. The only optional part is the day of delivery of the grain, and it's the principal's duty to provide him with sufficient margin to protect the contracts until maturity. All contracts are made subject to the rules of the respective Boards of Trade, which authorize the closing of contracts where either party, buyer or seller, refuses to margin as requested. Margins are merely the security for the fulfillment of the contract."——"Let there come a hard freeze, and you will see the biggest scare in wheat over winter-killing reports, and an advance that will freeze the shorts all out, but corn will decline."—[From "The Shattered Short; or, Split by a Straddle," by J. R. M.——Certain Chicago parties believe the stock of wheat in their market will be 15,000,000 bu by spring.——A shipment of corn was made from this market a few days ago, all of which graded No. 2 here, and the shippers of this corn were particular in obtaining the best of the No. 2 corn in store here; yet when this shipment arrived in Chicago the inspectors in that market would only grade it new mixed. The Committee of Review was called upon to examine this corn, but after they inspected it they only reversed the inspectors' decision on one car, making it No. 2, and this single car load was old corn. This proves conclusively that Chicago will not inspect new corn as No. 2. New mixed corn in Chicago is selling at 46½, or over 10c below the price of No. 2, the manipulated grade, and 2c below the price of No. 2 in St. Louis, and not then allowing for the difference in freights between the two markets, which is 3c per bushel. Actually, St. Louis is paying over 5c per bushel more to the country for its corn than Chicago. Let the country take a note of this.

Without the wild excitement and heavy trading of yesterday, the corn market of this forenoon was fully as unsettled, the changes in price as violent and the interest excited among speculators fully as well sustained as yesterday. With a 1c break in wheat and ⅝c decline in corn in Chicago right after the opening, the feeling was easy here early and the tendency downward, lower Eastern markets and dull cables helping towards the depression. The opening rates were ¼@⅜ off at 48¼ December, 48⅝ January and 52⅝ May, but from this the market gradually crawled up slowly until after the first call, when December mounted rapidly to 49, January to 49½ and May to 53⅝. A sharp recovery in Chicago, where they were buying on small receipts and a stronger wheat market, was the cause for the reaction here, the demand becoming urgent and selling offers decreasing perceptibly, though some of the leading houses here were feeding out all they could in a quiet way. But this strength was as short-lived as was the early weakness. Rather more unfavorable advices came in over the wire, the buying slackened off, sellers became bolder and then shortly before the noon call R. S. McCormick & Co., delivered 50,000 No. 2 corn on December contracts. The effect of this comparatively small amount was at once felt, and showed conclusively that the crowd did not want the actual stuff. This 50,000 bu-lot went around to different parties, who at once were eager to get rid of it, and as there were very few buyers the pressure to sell broke December to 47⅝. This demoralized month knocked the props out from under the other options, and as Chicago declined about this time, the whole line let down, January going to 48½, and May to 52½@52⅝. The late reaction in wheat and the alleged European war rumors put more strength into the market subsequently and prices rallied and closed firm, with December ¼c lower and other months ¼@⅜c higher than yesterday's close. Cash No. 2 mixed declined 1⅜c below yesterday's top rate, but was freely taken for export, and later recovered ⅜c from the bottom to 48. New mixed advanced and was strong and wanted for shipment, all offered meeting ready sale, closing at 44½ this and 45½ E. side. Other grades were scarce and firm.

The cent drop in Chicago wheat this morning sent the home market down ¼@½c, January opening at $1 02¼ and May at $1 09½. For a short time the feeling was easy, owing to the declines elsewhere, New York showing weakness during the first hour, cables reporting dull and easier markets, receipts at Western points holding up well—336 cars in Chicago alone and reports of a heavy increase in the visible. May went off ¼c more from the opening, but subsequently the whole market recovered tone, the market on the lake advancing, with free buying, and it was reported from there that while an immense amount of wheat had been sold early, it had all been readily absorbed. On the strength of these favorable advices January went up to $1 02½ and May to $1 09⅝. Then the market receiving another back set, the break in corn and the weakness of cash, forcing a rapid decline to $1 01¾ for January and $1 09⅛ for May. Again, however, was there a recovery, and this time war(?) rumors were used to influence the market. French rentes were reported lower, and speculators at once complicated European affairs on this and so much to their own satisfaction that they turned the market up. May was principally sought for and it advanced to $1 09¾, the same as yesterday's close, while the other options were nominally ⅛@⅜c lower than then. Cash No. 2 red sold ⅞c lower to 99 for regular, but was in demand at the decline, an exporter buying some, but the bulk going to shorts; E. side receipts were maintained in value and taken to fill orders. All other grades were dull and lower.

Oats were stronger and better, May selling at 34⅝, but trading was still very light. Cash oats were very strong, and under a searching shipping demand sold up ¾@1c, No. 2 selling regular at 29½; rejected was wanted at 29@29½ in St. L.

Lead very dull and seemingly no demand for spot offerings. Refined could have been bought at $3 40, as could hard, latest sale of latter being at that rate.

Grass Seeds—In demand and moderately active at $5 25@5 60; sales 22 sks at $5 45 and 104 sks at $5 60. Timothy firm at $1 25@1 30 for prime; redtop dull at 35@45.

Flaxseed—In demand and salable at $1 37.

Hempseed—Steady at $1 70.

Castor Beans—Prime salable $1 75; rejected $1 65.

Cotton.

There was no quotable change in spot values today, but futures, owing to shorts covering, were advanced, the upward movement starting in early and continuing, with more or less fluctuations, up to the close. In the spot markets Liverpool was moderately active, and the demand was freely supplied at quotations. New York was dull and easy at 10c for middlings and New Orleans easy at 10 3-16 for same. Locally the movement was very large, and, although there was no quotable change, the tone was steadier, and under the good demand sales amounted to over 2,400 bales. Futures at Liverpool opened quiet, and advanced 1-64d, but this was lost before the close. New York was steady and a point up, on some few months. From this values worked upwards to near the close, when the market weakened and prices fell off a little, but were still higher than last night's close by 2 to 3 points at the 2:30 p. m. call. New Orleans was quiet and steady, and at 1 p. m. was 2 to 5 points higher than last evening.

CATTLE—The market was rather slow about opening this morning, and although the run was quite fair and some very good lots were placed upon sale, buyers of all kinds showed a disposition to hold off, and it was not until late that they commenced operating to any extent. The demand was mostly from butchers and local dealers, who filled up with cows and mixed lots, an occasional bunch of butchers' steers being also taken by them. Prices, although quotably unchanged, showed evidence of weakness, and the tendency was more bearish than usual. There was a fair number of very decent steers among the arrivals, and Eastern shippers will find no trouble in filling their orders with very good stuff when they make up their minds to commence trading. The feeling for these was not strong, however, and buyers at a very early hour showed a disposition to bear prices, taking advantage of the liberal run, and a general desire on sellers' part to close out. HOGS—The market was again largely supplied, but the quality was poor and not to be compared with those offered yesterday. Trade opened stronger and bullish as regards values, and early sales were made at a slight advance, especially for Philadelphias, which brought from $5 15@5 25. Later the market eased up on unfavorable reports from above, and packers who up to this time had been backward, now came forward and commenced to talk business. Sellers were inclined to ask higher prices, but finally came down a little and meeting packers half-way, prices were fixed to the satisfaction of both, the range being placed at $4 70@5 10, which is a little better than the rates current the day before. The demand from shippers was active for both lights and heavies, and transfers were made at $4 50@4 70 to the former, who purchased a little better hogs than they did yesterday, and the feeling at these prices was quite firm, and the prospects favorable for a larger movement.

I AM one of those who believe that the power of taxation can be legitimately employed only for public purposes, or, in other words, that the object of all taxation should be revenue—revenue only, if you please; but if with this primary object in view the taxes on duties can be so adjusted as to aid our industries without imposing any burdens upon the people beyond what otherwise would have been necessary, there is nothing in the policy advocated by those who demand a reform in the tariff to forbid their encouragement or protection to that extent, and I think it can be demonstrated, so far as facts and figures can demonstrate any proposition upon such a subject, that such a policy would afford all the protection that any legitimate and well-conducted industry needs in this country. I do not recognize a principle that would impose a duty above the revenue point merely for the purpose of giving what is called protection. If we were called upon now for the first time to declare a principle or inaugurate a policy upon the subject, I should not hesitate to announce my adherence to that creed which demands the largest liberty in trade; that doctrine which opens the channels of commerce in all parts of the world and invites the producer and consumer to meet on equal terms in a free market for the exchange of their commodities; for I sincerely believe that all commercial restrictions are in the end injurious to the interests of the people.—[John G. Carlisle in Congress.

THE message is pervaded by the air of an eager angler silently waiting for a bite, or speaking only in guarded whispers.

THE London Times does not like the message. There was probably no thought of pleasing the London Times when the message was written.

JUDGING from ARTHUR's last message, we should say he had not yet come to a final conclusion as to which party's nomination he will apply for.

ARTHUR's message is about as inoffensive a document as ever emanated from the White House. He skates all around the thin places without getting near the danger line of any one of them.

ABOUT the one remaining asset the City of St. Louis has is its revision of the monopoly of the St. Louis Gas Company. This asset the water gas people kindly propose to relieve us of—to save us the trouble of keeping it.

ALFONSO may not backslide again, if the Prince of Wales does visit Madrid. That fine old vestal, ex-Queen ISABELLA, is there, and her moral support may sustain her wayward son's effort to be a good boy in spite of demoralizing associations.

A NOVELTY in French plays is one with a plot turning on a wife's discovery of the fact that she is really over head and ears in love with her own husband. Whether Parisian theater-goers will tolerate such a startling innovation remains to be seen.

TO BE consistent, our Republican friends ought to get up a business panic over the election of CARLISLE. This is what they lead us to expect, but the business interests of this country, with singular stubbornness, insist on maintaining a cheerful and prosperous aspect.

PRESIDENT FLAD of the B. O. P. I. recommends a cable road out to Forest Park, and now we suppose that some of the best citizens of St. Louis, who own property along the line, will get right up on their hind legs and protest that, if this improvement is allowed, they will be ruined.

MAJOR J. N. EDWARDS telegraphs from Washington for the benefit of the Globe-Democrat, that "the Southern Confederacy is again in the saddle." But the immortal J. N. FREE has not yet been heard from on the subject. Before believing this startling report we require the concurrent testimony of both of the J. N.'s.

IN the newspaper reports of talks with the Prohibitionists about their plans and prospects in Missouri, there have occurred some references to Senator VEST, which have elicited from him the card that appears elsewhere in this paper. Senator VEST's position towards the Prohibition movement has been so clearly and frankly stated, and so consistently maintained, that we doubt if anybody has been misled in regard to it by the confused statements of other persons.

EVEN if the ordinance giving the Water Gas Company its franchise were unobjectionable in other respects, it would still give no reason why the city should give away a franchise which is of no benefit to the city but which will be worth millions in cash when the time comes to operate under it. As a matter of fact, however, the ordinance is remarkable chiefly for the tightness with which it binds the city and the looseness with which it binds the gas company. For instances it assumes to prevent the company from transferring its franchise. Even if a municipal ordinance could deprive a corporation of a statutory right, it certainly could not prevent the stockholders of this company from buying the works of the St. Louis Company, and paying for them in stock of the Heat and Power Company. Under such an arrangement the prohibition against consolidation would be about as effectual as the prohibition against furnishing low-power gas, and we have all had experience of the effect of this latter prohibition.

CIVIL RIGHTS AGAIN.

Senator EDMUNDS comes promptly to the front with a new civil rights bill, the object of which, he says, is to secure to the colored citizens rights guaranteed to them by the Constitution, but practically denied to them by discriminations on account of race or color in the administration of the laws. He proposes to accomplish this by processes strictly in accordance with the Constitution as expounded by the late Supreme Court decision, and if his bill really promises such a consummation we hope it will pass without a dissenting vote from the Democratic side.

But from the telegraphic synopsis of the bill we fear the Senator is only treating the colored race to another brutum fulmen, like the original civil rights law, or like his futile law against polygamy. There is now no law discriminating against any citizen on account of race or color, and no court can nor will enforce such a law, because it would be unconstitutional. If any new remedy is required to secure to any citizen, white or colored, the enjoyment of any right the Constitution confers upon him, let us have it, in the name of the Constitution and in the name of equality before the law. Senator EDMUNDS' bill, however, unless there is more in it than appears from the synopsis, merely holds out to the colored man the delusive hope of securing something which existing law does not guarantee to any man, white or colored.

That eminent Republican, Judge HILTON of New York, has demonstrated the fact that he can exclude from his Saratoga hotel not only colored men, but white men of a particular race or religion, or of any race or religion, and that for this social wrong they have no remedy except in their own social and business resources. Will Mr. EDMUNDS' bill compel Judge HILTON to open his hotel to his Jewish fellow-citizens? If not, then EDMUNDS' new bill is simply a fraud upon the colored people; another attempt to hold them fast in the Republican party by flattering their social pride with delusive promises. Its elaborate provisions for transferring their civil rights cases to the Federal Courts really look like a broad jest, as in most of the Southern State courts the negroes of the South have more influence as voters and jurymen than they have in those Federal Courts which have torn the old civil rights law to pieces and flung the scraps in their faces.

HOW IT LOOKS.

What is the sum and substance of the President's message?

The foreign relations of the country are all peaceable, its credit is good, its finances sound, its income superfluous, its taxation enormous. The pension list fails to absorb our surplus; our army establishment is the most expensive and useless of any of its size in the world; our navy is more expensive and useless than our army; the country is prosperous, but necessary legislation remains neglected.

In other words the people are doing well; the politicians are doing badly. That is "about the size of it."

OFFICIAL LAWLESSNESS.

Chief of Police CAMPBELL has been so faithful and efficient that it would be unjust to censure him too severely in the ERNST case for having followed a bad example that he had seen practiced ever since he had been in the service. Yet it is putting the case very mildly to call it a case of oppression in office which sets aside one of the plainest and highest rights of innocent citizens.

The facts in the case suffice to condemn it. On the 30th of November the Chief of Police of New Orleans telegraphs to our Chief of Police to arrest ANNIE ERNST, aged 19, giving the names of the people with whom she is probably living. No offense is imputed to her, but the fact that the message comes from the Chief of Police is an indication that she is an escaped criminal who is wanted for the purposes of justice. This important circumstance is not mentioned, however, nor alluded to in the telegram. No letter is written, no particulars given, and when the police find the girl three days later and arrest her, they do not know why they are arresting her. They are the blind tools of a mysterious power a thousand miles away, lictors of a great decemvir, who orders, but does not condescend to explain his orders.

Such a proceeding carried on by officers of justice in the name of justice is an outrage, all the more monstrous because it is dishonored by hoary precedent. It is to be hoped that such another case may not disgrace our police record, and that no example or punishment may be needed to enforce the principle that no citizen shall be put in jail except upon reasonable cause properly sworn to and verified.

DESERTIONS IN THE ARMY.

An army in which twelve per cent of the enlisted men desert every twelve months can hardly be considered a military organization.

It must be remembered that nearly one-half of our army is engaged in easy garrison duty. The men are furnished with comfortable quarters in pleasant neighborhoods where there is every inducement to remain in the service. If under such circumstances we find one-eighth of the whole army deserting every year, it is impossible to resist the conclusion that if such an army were called on to face the hardships of actual war, it would be worse than useless.

It is to be hoped that the Secretary of War will be able to improve this situation. His task will be a difficult one, as the army fossils who have gravitated to the heads of the departments are satisfied with things as they are, and think that a system which has provided them with soft places is the ideal system of the world. The people who pay for the army understand that the idea of an army is not to furnish soft places for fossils, but to furnish an efficient force of fighting men. A system which goes on enlisting deserters year after year is a self-confessed fraud.

A CHRISTIAN LEAGUE.

One of the needs of St. Louis is a league among honest and well-disposed citizens who object to being pressed into the service of certain street railroad companies as conductors without pay.

There is no law requiring such compulsory personal service from the citizens to the corporations. The corporations have as much right to compel the citizens to work with pick and spade repairing the track as they have to compel passengers to pass up fares and make change to save the expense to the company.

The citizens of St. Louis have endured this imposition because they are a patient, a polite and law-abiding community.

We are the friends of the companies. We have not counseled violence; we have not advocated a resort to bloodshed. We do not now. But the air is filled with the low murmur of coming revolution; the times are ripe for a change, and we want the change to come easy. We suggest the formation of an Anti-Bobtail League as a vent for feelings which might otherwise expand themselves in dangerous excesses. It is a remedy which has been tried in other cities, and which has powerful arguments to recommend it in St. Louis.

OUR esteemed contemporary, the New York WORLD, has recently given fresh proof of its growth and success by the very creditable display it makes of those small advertisements which go under the name of "wants," and its Sunday edition was especially noticeable for the number and variety of these advertisements. There is only one way to get them—and that is by having the circulation. The POST-DISPATCH in St. Louis is the medium for this class of advertising. It comes to us simply because in our columns it reaches the largest number of readers, and when we find the New York WORLD getting that same kind of business it is only fair to infer that the WORLD is booming.

SOMEBODY should try and convince Col. BURNES and Maj. EDWARDS that CARLISLE was not the wild-eyed man from Kentucky who told the New York police on Evacuation Day that he was there to assassinate President ARTHUR. Unless that mysterious stranger can be caught and identified, we fear the St. Joseph wing of the Democratic party will never get over its fright. It can see nothing now but visions of bloody shirts, with woe and defeat for the Democracy, until FRANK JAMES is turned loose to assist Maj. EDWARDS in holding the party up by the tail.

IT is pleasant to note the harmony in the Cabinet, and to reflect that a trifling difference of opinion on the rather important question of postal rates does not interfere with the good feeling be tween the President and the Postmaster-General. The President is in favor of reducing the rate on drop-letters to one cent, while the Postmaster-General is opposed to the reduction. It will be remembered that the late lamented HOWE opposed the reduction from three cents to two cents, which was passed to the country's great satisfaction.

VEST'S VIEWS.

A Card Reiterating His Former Declarations in Regard to Prohibition.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

In a late number of your paper I find the following:

"One great point gained, the Prohibitionists think, is the modification of Senator Vest's views on the subject, and the practical withdrawal of his active opposition, which, in large measure, aided to defeat the submission of the question in the last Legislature. The Senator has written a letter to Mr. McMichael declaring that it is the duty of members of the Legislature to vote in accordance with the sentiment of their constituents, no matter what their own private views may be; and he has also stated that in the event of the passage of an amendment, he would advocate its enforcement, and that it was his opinion that every citizen should do all in his power to secure its rigid enforcement."

As I consider myself entirely competent to the task of expressing my opinion on any public question, and of also selecting the time and mode, I deny the right of any individual or newspaper to represent me without my consent.

I have not changed, withdrawn or modified, in any degree or respect, any opinion I have ever held on the subject of Prohibition, and I reiterate every utterance I have made upon that subject. I consider Prohibition by the State, as advocated in Missouri, undemocratic, wrong in principle, impracticable, and, if adopted, the prolific source of perjury, disregard of law, and social meanness.

Whilst these have been, and are, my opinions, which I am ready at all times to enforce by my voice and vote, I have always said, and say now, that every member of the Legislature should represent the will of his constituents as to the question of submission, or any other public question, and that he alone can determine what the will of the electors in his county or district may be. The Democratic party does not seek to thwart or defeat the will of the people, and, whatever may be my opinions or those of any other citizen, the will of the majority must govern. For myself, I shall vote against any candidate for the General Assembly, favoring submission, for I believe that no good can result from Prohibition, or any agitation of the question, but I represent myself, and the member elected will represent the majority of the voters in his county or district upon this and every other public question. That majority must determine through its representative, whether Prohibition shall be submitted to a popular vote.

I have also said, and say now, that every law enacted by the Legislature, and adjudged constitutional by the court, should be respected and obeyed until repealed, and any statement that I have ever advocated any other sentiment is false, if not malicious.

These views have been so often expressed by me that I did not suppose any reiteration could be of interest to either friend or foe.

Let me say, once for all, that local option, as it has existed in Missouri for years, and high license, furnish, in my judgment, the only sensible and practicable solution of the liquor problem.

Appeals to sentiment or prejudice will not settle the question; nor will any man worthy the right of suffrage or the respect of honest men be deterred from expressing his opinion by the senseless clamor that he advocates intemperance.

Prohibition is not the road to temperance, and experience demonstrates it. It neither educates temperance or enforces it, and notwithstanding the opinions of many good and zealous people, the result will be the same, until human nature ceases to be what it has been through all the ages, and will be to the end. Wealthy Senators.

From the New York World.

Seventeen United States Senators are worth, in the aggregate, $55,350,000. They are Fair of Nevada, $18,000,000; Miller of California, $4,000,000; Sawyer of Wisconsin, $7,000,000; Brown of Georgia, $5,000,000; Palmer of Michigan, $7,500,000; Sabin of Minnesota, $2,000,000; Bowen of Colorado, $2,000,000; Hale of Maine, $1,000,000; Miller of New York, $3,000,000; Don Cameron, $5,000,000; Plumb of Kansas, $500,000; Pendleton of Ohio, $2,000,000; Sherman of Ohio, $250,000; VanWyck of Nebraska, $250,000; David Davis of Illinois, $4,000,000; Bayard of Delaware, $100,000; McPherson of New Jersey, $250,000. It will soon be easier for a poor man to go through a needle's eye than for a poor man to get into the United States Senate.

POLITICAL DRIFT.

SENATOR EDMUNDS has discovered legislation supplementary to the Edmunds law will be necessary to the extirpation of polygamy.

BLAINE made a mistake in stopping his history to distribute the whisky money. He is getting lots of good advice all along the line.

JOHN SHERMAN is very much opposed to the Arthur boom. He can see no good reason why the party should go outside of Ohio for a candidate.

THAT second letter which W. Walter Phelps wrote to J. Warren Keifer seems destined to create the suspicion that Mr. Phelps wears corsets and chews gum.

LEE CRANDALL, of the Greenback party, says that Gen. Butler has consented to accept the nomination of the National party for President and will make the campaign.

ROBBER ROBESON feels that the nomination of Keifer for Speaker by the Republicans of the House is a delicate personal compliment, and his eyes swim with grateful tears.

ABOUT a score of Virginia postoffices, created solely to favor Mahone's plans, have been discontinued since his defeat. Every department of the Government was worked in the interest of the debt repudiator.

MR. MACKAY, the bonanza man, and Col. Ochiltree, the Congressional story-teller, arrived in Washington together. They have been roaming around the great Southwest, and conclude that Congress ought to vote $3,000,000 to improve Galveston harbor.

GEN. FREMONT wants to be reinstated and placed on the retired list with the rank of Major-General.

MR. DAVID WARD, the richest man in Michigan, owns lumber tracts and mining lands to the amount of $25,000,000.

GEO. W. CABLE, the novelist, has shown on the lecture stand that he has fine dramatic ability quite as unexpected as his literary genius.

JOHN RUSKIN is a slightly built man, with admirable powers of conversation, a soft voice, a pleasant smile, a modest manner and kind blue eyes.

MR. PARNELL's American friends have sent him $17,517 38. The draft for that sum goes by the Britannic, that left New York for England Saturday.

COL. FREDERICK T. BENT, Third Artillery, has been, on his own application, placed on the retired list of the army, under the forty years service provision.

THE birthplace of Admiral Raphael J. Semmes, at Washington, Ga., was recently sold. The Semmes family aided in founding the quaint old Catholic Church at that place.

MR. GLADSTONE declines to interfere with the Mormon missionaries who are plying their trade in England, but as he is far advanced in life there is probably no danger of his being tempted to commit polygamy himself.

THE New York correspondent of the Chicago Tribune found Monsignor Capel the other day in a superb $10-a-day room, overlooking Fifth avenue, at the Brunswick, in New York, writing a lecture on "The Poverty of Jesus."

CHARLES DRAKE of Milledgeville, Ga., having been requested some ten years ago by Judah P. Benjamin to trace the origin of the Drake families in that State, has completed the family tree. Sir Francis Drake, the voyager, is the stem of the tree, and his three sons, all of whom settled in Oglethorpe County, are the first limbs.

ACCORDING to the Philadelphia Press, the grandson of Francis Scott-Key and John Eager Howard have been playing to rough luck in their native Baltimore. One of them has unsuccessfully applied for the position of private secretary to the Mayor and the other has lost his place as turnkey at the Penitentiary.

THE METROPOLITAN PRESS.

What the Editors of the New York Journals Are Saying To-Day.

By Telegraph to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, December 5.—The WORLD says: "It was a poor representative who did not have a load of fragrant flowers on his desk at the opening day of the Lower House of Congress. Some of the desks fairly groaned under flora's sweet gifts, and the air waxed dull with the scent of the tube rose. Of course a majority of the gentlemen who sat embowered in posies, the envy of the galleries, bought their own flowers and had them sent in. But hundreds of dollars must have been spent in this useless luxury. We are rolling on towards Roman extravagance and decay. It is a bad omen for the republic founded by our simple fathers, when it requires as many costly flowers to induct a member of Congress as it does to inter a popular prize-fighter or burglar in New York City."

THE TRIBUNE.

The Tribune says: Governor Pattison of Pennsylvania made a desperate effort yesterday to win back a little popularity for his party and himself. He vetoed the bill appropriating $457,000 to pay the members of the Legislature for remaining in extra session since last spring, on the ground that they had done no work and deserved no salary. Unfortunately for him, he touched the members in a tender place, and the Legislature promptly passed the measure over his veto. The tidal wave Governors all along the line are indeed having a hard time. It is doubtful if anything they could do would save even themselves from the general wreck caused by the ebb of the tide."

THE SUN.

The Sun says: "Well, the truth is that in his inaugural speech Mr. Carlisle seems all the time to be playing Mr. Randall's own music, and he plays it very neatly, too, considering. If Randall had made the speech he would have expressed the identical sentiments."

THE TIMES.

The Times says: "One of the most common and, until the passage of the Civil Service Act the most unanswerable, objection to a Government telegraph, is met by that provision of Senator Edmunds' bill which requires an examination by a board appointed for the purpose of all applicants for positions as clerks, operators, electricians, etc.

THE HERALD.

The Herald says: "The bill providing for a Government postal telegraph, that was introduced in the Senate yesterday by Senator Edmunds, marks the beginning of a movement in Congress that cannot but produce some results. This bill and like measures should be studied attentively, as the interests involved are important."

THE PEOPLE'S FORUM.

Where the Readers of the Post-Dispatch Get a Hearing.

ST. LOUIS, December 5, 1883.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

To take, by governmental compulsion, a nickel from every other man's pocket and put them into my own pocket—this is tariff protection.

If tariff protection is not wrong, nothing is wrong.

Tariff protection is out of its proper date. In the ages when the King was "the Lord's anointed," when he could build up or pull down, could enrich or oppress in his despotic caprice, when royal favoritism made and royal frowns unmade, tariff protection was among its kindred.

To-day tariff protection is an anachronism.

Tariff protection is legalized inequality.

The question of free trade or protection is a question of politico-economic science. The selection of Mr. Carlisle is one of the great triumphs of the age. It is a triumph of science. It is a triumph which scientific minds throughout the world will welcome with gladness.

The efforts of the opponents of science to disparage it by allusions to an issue settled a quarter of a century ago, is becoming. The opponents of science have always sought to array the ignorant against truth by appealing to the dogmas and prejudices of the past. Perhaps they should be commended in such opposition since they can furnish nothing better.

OFFICE OF COTE BRILLIANTE SUB-STATION, FIFTH POLICE DISTRICT,
ST. LOUIS, December 3, 1883.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

As your columns have been open for a long time to captious criticisms of the police force, collectively and individually, I would thank you if you would give place in your columns to this communication in reply to the sneak who is afraid to sign his name to a communication signed "A Subscriber," in your issue of the 4th inst. The police force of this city numbers about 500, rank and file, comprising men of every nationality and religion. Every member of the department is individually responsible for his official acts, and any citizen who feels himself aggrieved by any oppressive act of any member of the force has his remedy; and why should he not proceed against the officer individually, without casting reflections against the entire department. A merchant on 'Change might be guilty of embezzlement, but who would think of casting reflections on the honorable gentlemen comprising the same? The Police Department, like all other human combinations, is comprised of good, bad and indifferent, and the members of the department who pride themselves as honorable citizens in all transactions with their fellow men would be thankful to the POST-DISPATCH for its characteristic "square deal."

Over-Loaded Horses.

ST. LOUIS, December 4, 1883.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

If there is such a thing in St. Louis as a Humane Society, if they should send one of their representatives to the first ferry boats that cross from East St. Louis to St. Louis, and on this side will watch for even one boat, he will see the overburden and the lashes that the poor animals get getting up that levee. Where they were repairing this morning, especially, one team as a specialty, a gray and black mule, doing more than five horses' labor. I have been in four cities lately, and in no case have I seen such over-loading. This is from a man who knows what he is talking about. I have freighted across the plains. I was for several years agent for the El Paso Stage Company; drove team for them. Am now a practical horseman, and know what a horse ought to do. In all my travels I have seen no such over-loading as in St. Louis. Am a citizen. We have the best horses in the world for labor, taken care of, and it is a shame they should be treated thus.

ST. LOUIS, December 4, 1883.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

In your issue of to-day I notice a communication relative to President Maxon and the Vandeventer bob-tails. This is only one among very many others which have appeared recently in your columns, and all of a similar tenor, namely, opposition to Maxon and the bob-tail. Now, Mr. Maxon is a personal friend of mine and I can fully attest the fact that he is a shrewd business man, and hence not at all likely to pay much attention to this line of criticism. He knows that talk is a very cheap commodity, and when dealt out in such scattering doses is non-effective. The patrons on the south of the extension have the Olive Street and those on the north have the Franklin Avenue Line. The shortest road to either Mr. Maxon's favor or business judgment will be found in the withdrawal of their patronage from the bob tail. Try this and talk less.

"FOR FOREST PARK."

President Flad Points Out Three Feasible Routes There.

Horse, Cable or Elevated?—Necessity of Platting the County—An Interesting Report—The House "L" Road Bill Recommitted.

At the meeting of the House of Delegates last evening, the members who have all along distinguished themselves by their opposition to the elevated railroad measure, indulged in all sorts of fantastic, absurd and unreasonable amendments. City Counselor Bell had been asked to draw a damage clause for the bill. He submitted one in response to the request, which the lawyers of the House pronounced as fully covering the ground, and the projectors of the enterprise admitted was fair and reasonable, as it clearly established the relations of all parties concerned. The comedians who proposed such amendments as, "that said road shall be operated by the Keely motor," however, succeeded in loading the bill with so many amendments that the friends of the measure were glad to consent to its recommitment, with the understanding that it be reported next Friday evening. The bill will come back at the next meeting, with Bell's clause inserted and the other amendments forgotten. It will then go through another bombarding from the representatives of a few brick houses that will fall down if not removed within a few years. Mr. O. D. Tucker did not seem to be at all cast down last evening over the treatment the measure he has labored for night and day for two years had received. He confidently predicted its passage at the next meeting. Once past the House, he anticipates no trouble in the Council. While the House was engaged "in sticking splinters into the 'L' road bill's body preparatory to setting fire to the quivering mass," as a delegate expressed it, the Council was engaged in considering the question of

and the western suburbs, in another form. Some time last summer the Council, by resolutions, requested the President of the Board of Public Improvements to give some study to the question of rapid transit to Forest Park, and to suggest a horse, cable and elevated railroad route. Colonel Flad replied in one of the most interesting and elaborate reports ever sent from the body of which he is the chief. The members of the Council listened to it with rapt attention, and there was not a dissenting vote to Mr. Stone's resolution that 500 copies of the report be printed in book form, and that the accompanying plat be handsomely mounted and framed, and hung in the Council Chamber. The report deals with the practicable routes to the park, and incidentally calls up the absolute necessity of an immediate platting of the newly-acquired territory. After proper preface, and acknowledgement of the resolution,

COL. FLAD SAYS:

"The request expressed in the resolution that I should recommend three routes, either by elevated, cable, or horse railroads, and either in connection with the street railroads now in part constructed towards Kings' Highway, either by one of the present tracks west of Fourth street, or by any other route which would give communication between Fourth street and Forest Park, I will attempt to comply with so far as the insufficient data at hand, the lack of any skilled assistants who could be intrusted with the collection of such data, and the limited time which the regular duties of my office allowed me to devote to the subject would admit. The conclusion at which I have arrived is that the three routes to Forest Park which would best subserve the public, without injuring the private interests, should be located on Lindell avenue, Forest Park boulevard and Clayton road. Lindell avenue is a continuation of Olive street, and the route over these two streets is the shortest ones possible between Fourth street and Kings Highway, as they form almost a straight line. The width of Lindell avenue, from Grand to Kings Highway, is 100 feet, and the grades, if, established as now proposed, will consist of two unbroken planes, with the exception of the vertical deflections, one near King's Highway to allow the Belt Railroad to cross the avenue in a tunnel, and the other between Grand and Cabanne avenues. The maximum gradient on this avenue is 3-15 feet in 100 feet (between Cabanne street and Vandeventer avenue.) The great width of the street and the adoption of a proper cross section for its improvement would remove all reasonable objection on the part of property owners. The sidewalks might be made ten feet wide; next to each sidewalk a strip 24 feet wide planted with a double row of trees, might be reserved for a railroad track and for gas and water pipe, etc. This would leave a roadway 32 feet wide, amply sufficient to accommodate all the travel that may ever be expected. In this way the cost of improving the avenue would be greatly reduced, while its beauty would be enhanced, and the more obnoxious features on ordinary street railroads be removed. If the road were operated by cable, for which this route is particularly well adapted, both by alignment and gradients not only west of Grand avenue, but along Olive street to Fourth. As the Missouri Railway Company is already operating a double track railroad from Fourth street to Channing avenue, it would seem proper that this company be granted the right to King's Highway, on condition that within a period of five years, it reconstruct its road as a cable road from Fourth street to Grand avenue, or throughout its whole length within ten years. By this measure, the public demand for increased facilities in reaching Forest Park could probably be accommodated in the shortest time, property along Olive street would be accommodated by the change in the system of operation, and on this route there would be some prospect of such a road becoming a paying investment. The great facility with which a cable road can increase its carrying capacity at any time would do away with the overcrowding of cars, which is now a great source of complaint. What condition as to pecuniary compensation for the right of way, and what rules in regard to the operation of the road should be imposed on the company, may safely be left to the wisdom of the Municipal Assembly.

TO EXTEND A DOUBLE TRACK

Whenever the construction of

to Forest Park shall be deemed necessary, Forest Park boulevard, in my opinion, would offer the best route on which a road of this kind could be located without depreciating its value as a general thoroughfare, provided the improvement of the boulevard is properly planned. I would propose to locate the elevated tracks in the center of the boulevard on a strip 30 feet wide planted with shrubbery and flowers and bounded on each side with a grass plat 24 feet wide each, and sidewalks each 12 feet wide would occupy the sides of the boulevard. It is hardly to be expected that the property-owners from Grand avenue to the Park would offer much opposition to the construction of an elevated road under these conditions. But an elevated road with Grand avenue and King's highway for its terminus would evidently be an absurdity, and how to reach Fourth street with the least injury to private interests, and at a cost which would warrant the investment, is a matter which I suppose even the parties applying for charters have never fully considered, and which I have had neither the leisure or the means to study as it deserves. All I can safely say on the subject is this, that if, as can hardly be doubted, any charter granted to an elevated railroad company by the Municipal Assembly will contain a provision holding the company liable for any damages to property on streets, through which it is located, the most feasible route from Grand to Jefferson avenue would probably be that as shown on the plat as proposed by the St. Louis Elevated and Rapid Transit Railroad Company, while east of Jefferson avenue the location proposed jointly by the Southern Hotel, Union Depot and Forest Park Railway, the Laclede Passenger Railway and the Rapid Transit Railway would seem to be the best one, and probably offer the least obstacles as regards right of way and compensation for damages to property. But it appears extremely doubtful, whether even if the necessary capital could be secured to pay for cost of construction, right of way and damages, the benefit which it would confer on the public would warrant the granting of a franchise for an elevated road on the proposed route, unless it was brought into connection with some railroad reaching more remote parts of the country tributary to St. Louis. Without having made a very thorough examination of the subject, I may state my belief that a branch of the elevated road could be constructed somewhere between Grand avenue and Cabanne street, crossing Lindell avenue, Pine street and Laclede avenue on bridges which would give access to the heart of the city to the rapidly growing population living along the line of the West End Narrow Gauge Road, and would greatly enhance the usefulness of that road and the value of the property along its route. I would therefore respectfully suggest that if a franchise for an elevated road from King's Highway to Fourth street, or perhaps the Levee, be granted, the construction of a branch from the line on the boulevard to the narrow gauge railroad be made a condition of the grant.

AS A THIRD ROUTE

to Forest Park, if any further accommodation should become necessary, I would recommend that the right of way be granted for a branch road extending from the Missouri Railway at the Manchester road along the Clayton road to King's Highway, said branch to be constructed and operated as a horse railroad. The three routes which I have related satisfy the legal requirements as to distance between parallel roads, and would, undoubtedly, give ample accommodations to the public for a long period of years. As regards my selection of routes for one of each class of road (horse, cable and elevated) I do not wish to be understood as recommending for each route any class to the exclusion of the others, but desired simply to give my opinion as to the kind of railroad for which each of the routes would be best adapted. I may add that I would advise that Pine street and Laclede avenue be left as far as possible unobstructed by street or other railroad tracks.

PLATTING THE NEW LIMITS.

After thus complying with the request of your honorable body as far as practicable, I beg leave to call your attention to some of the obstacles which I had to contend with in considering the subject, being the insufficiency of data as to grades, sewerage, etc. Only a very small part of the territory under consideration—outside the old city limits—have the street grades been established, nor has a system of sewerage been denied, because the necessary surveys and levelments could not be taken by the corps of the Street Commissioner, and even when taken could not receive the proper attention at the hands of the commissioner for the reason that the regular routine work to which they have to attend did not leave sufficient time for such work. Yet the questions of graduation and sewerage are of such importance in deciding questions, not only of the kind propounded to me, but of those daily asked by the many people who are moving their residences into the suburban territory, that I embrace this occasion to call the attention of the Honorable Municipal Assembly to an evil which is becoming yearly of greater proportions. As stated in the Board report for 1881 it would take the full time of a competent engineer, with a sufficient corps of surveyors and draughtsmen, for several years, at least, to make the necessary surveys and levelments and to collect the data from which to work out a comprehensive plan for the grading and surveying of the forty miles of territory which the charter added to the area of the city. Unless this is done, and done at the earliest possible moment, blunders will be unavoidable which will ultimately cause losses both to the city and to the property owners, a thousand fold greater than the cost of providing the means for an intelligent and careful plan, without taking into consideration the inconvenience and vexation which may not make themselves felt for some time, but which are sure to follow. I am aware that it is extremely unpopular to favor any increase in the number of employes, but I should feel I was neglecting my duty if I failed to call your attention to this matter. I would respectfully recommend that the necessary means be provided to admit of the appointment of a proper surveying force whose exclusive duty it would be, under the direction of the Board of Public Improvements, to collect the necessary data and provide a plan of street alignment, street grades and a system of sewerage. Such plans and maps of this section of the city are even indispensable of the proper location of the numerous railroads which are applying for right of way are to be properly fixed for the best interests of the roads and of the public. The appropriations which will have to be made if the measure here recommended is to be carried out, should be $8,000 for the year 1874, $10,000 for 1885 and $6,000 for 1886, which would probably complete the work.

THE CITY TO SURVEY IT.

I may add the suggestion that if the construction of an elevated road should be deemed desirable, the most proper mode of dealing with the question would appear to be for the city to have surveys and plans for such a road made, with all details and estimates, with a view of selecting the route most favorable to the public, and least hurtful to the private interests."

The communication made an evident impression upon the members of the Council. A POST-DISPATCH reporter found the whole body impressed with the necessity of an immediate platting of the new city limits. As to the elevated railroad they were more reticent.

The ladies of the North St. Louis Presbyterian Church gave a basket sociable in the parlors of the church last night. A broom brigade drill was the feature of the evening.

The laborers employed at the new Exposition building complain of numerous thefts of late. Coats, tools and other articles left lying around have been stolen by loungers and lookers-on during the course of the work.

An alarm from box 31 at 12 o'clock last night was caused by a fire in the establishment of the Centennial Printing Company, at 418 North Third street. The fire was caused by the ignition of some paper in the engine room. Damage $300.

A special meeting of the Building Committee of the School Board was held yesterday afternoon. The architect was ordered to make the necessary repairs on the Lincoln School. The damage done the building by the late fire amounted to about $715.

The lady managers of the Memorial Home gave the last of their series of dinners in the basement of the Merchants' Exchange yesterday. Each gentleman was presented with a handsome eight-page souvenir, containing a history of the institution.

As Gottlieb Mischler of 211 Elm street was asleep in a rolling mill near the Water Works yesterday morning, some brute threw a shovelful of hot coals on him. He plunged into a tank of water near by and thus saved himself from being horribly burned.

The annual election of Tuscan Lodge, No. 360, A. F. & A. M., took place last night, and resulted as follows: Worshipful Master, Jay L. Torrey; Senior Warden, Trusten P. Dyer; Junior Warden, W. W. Zimmerman; Treasurer, John W. Mortimer; Secretary, Alfred H. White.

The following board of trustees was elected by the Granite Mountain Mining Company, at the office of the company, 417 Olive street, yesterday: Louis Duestrow, Charles Clark, Auguste B. Ewing, Edwin Harrison, John R. Lionberger, Chas. D. McClure, Lewis M. Rumsey, Auguste F. Shapleigh and Chas. Taussig.

At the Mission Hall of the Church of the Messiah at Ninth and Wash streets, the Industrial Branch of the Hebrew Free School was formally opened yesterday afternoon. About forty children were in attendance. The sessions will be held every Tuesday and Thursday from 4:15 to 5:30 o'clock p. m.

Justice Lewis yesterday called the case of Smith vs. Fitzporter. Smith sues Fitzporter, a physician, for the recovery of $50, paid him for medical attendance. He had guaranteed a cure, but neglected his patient after a week's attendance. The justice took the case under advisement.

The regular meeting of the Woman's Board of Missions of the Southwest was held at 1107 Olive street yesterday afternoon. A memorial is shortly to be prepared and sent to Queen Victoria, asking for the abolition of child marriage in India. Reports from the different missionary societies of the city showed that active preparations were being made to send Christmas boxes to the missions in Alaska, Utah and other places. Other missionary matters were discussed at length.

THE STAGE.

Henry Irving's Philadelphia Engagement—A Bad Hamlet.

Sothern at the Grand—Salsbury's Troubadours at Pope's—Second Week of the Planter's Wife—Other Local Theaters—Splinters.

By Telegraph to the Post-Dispatch.

PHILADELPHIA, December 5.—The very pretty, spacious and convenient Chestnut Street Opera House was packed last night to witness "Hamlet," by the Lyceum Theater Company. In this country of course the chief interest with those who had seen Mr. Irving in other parts was to witness this performance, and it must be owned that this feeling was not so much of reverential eagerness as of a somewhat hilarious anticipation. During the first two acts Hamlet was not, indeed, a mirth-provoking personage, but he was unquestionably and without relief very dull. The vices of his sing-song elocution, the vices of his galvanic movements and the unstable equilibrium of his attitudes were never more apparent. There was really nothing in his part of the first two acts but a series of slowly changing poses, in which his lengthy and lugubrious legs assumed the functions of a pair of flexible dividers, upon the one fixed foot of which, as upon a pivot, he slowly revolved into one after another of the stained glass attitudes, which did not indeed recall any of the

with which amateurs and parodists have made the New York stage so familiar, but it did bring Bunthorne to mind. The famous soliloquies were not well done. It would be difficult to name a single blank verse speech that comes blended from Mr. Irving's mouth. The "Tis not alone my inky cloak, good mother," the "Is not monstrous that this player here," the "To be or not to be," were all more or less monotonously mouthed. But Mr. Irving's talents shine in rapid and rushing action, not in deliberate speech; and of action there is in "Hamlet" very little in these two acts. The apparition of the ghost is not an exception. Besides that the ghost on this occasion with an unusually free and easy action for a ghost, and having apparently borrowed from a prayer meeting his notions of the style of oratory which prevails in spectral circles. Hamlet's playhere, too, was quite ineffectual, and the applause at the end of the first act and at the end of the second act was plainly perfunctory. But this account after all is inadequate, for even in these two acts Mr. Irving managed to make manifest an intelligent and interesting view of the character, although his defective method as an actor, his lack of complete mastery of the means of histrionic expression, prevented him from making it manifest dramatically, so as to make that electric and instantaneous appeal to the sympathies of an audience, which makes the difference between and an illustrated lecture on Hamlet, and Mr. Irving's Hamlet in these earlier scenes is in the nature of an illustrated lecture. The evidence of study and criticism not yet assimilated so as to come out as free expression is what these scenes have to show us. In the third act the evidence of study is supplanted by the results of study. The third scene, Hamlet's interview with Ophelia, is one to which Mr. Irving has given much thought and upon which he has written a clever critical note. Here he makes it evident, at least he makes it altogether plausible, that Hamlet's cruel repulse of Ophelia comes from his own remorse that he has permitted his love to beguile him from his duty of vengeance, and is consistent with the depth of his affection. This is a subtle conception to put clearly before an audience by the means of the actor's art, but Mr. Irving did it admirably well and it was promptly recognized by the first burst of spontaneous applause Hamlet's acting had evoked.

WAS A TRYING ILLUSION.

A STILL HIGHER PITCH

was hit in the action of Hamlet during the progress of the play. The suppressed excitement with which he watches the cheese of his "mouse trap," until his excitement becomes uncontrollable, and at the crisis of the crime he rolls and scrambles across the stage and climbs into the throne the King has abandoned in order to shout his delirious exultation. All this is wrought up to one of those thrilling effects of eccentric acting, for which we are willing to forgive Mr. Irving so much.

THE THEATERS.

"Dnndreary" had a better audience at the Grand last evening, and his points were well taken by the auditors. It is a clever piece of mimicry, and in the hands of young Sothern is very amusing. It will be given for the last time this afternoon and evening and to-morrow evening.

"The Planter's Wife," a most interesting and well acted drama, is drawing large audiences to the Olympic, and the leading characters in the hands of Harry Lacy, Ralph Delmore and Emily Rigl are invested with great importance and strength.

Crowded houses are the rule at the People's, the excellent show being given by the Howard Atheneum Company being far above the average. Its features are fresh, and the people the very cream of the variety profession.

The Standard Theater is doing a good business in the "Muldoon's Picnic," and in conjunction with Yank Newell's company in the olio, it provides good entertainment.

Salsburry's Troubadours are keeping big audiences in the best of humor at Pope's, and bushels of buttons are removed from the auditorium after every performance. Nat Salsbury and Miss McHenry have been christened "friends of the button-makers." "Greenroom Fun" is one of the best things ever done here, and deserves its great popularity. It will be given this afternoon and this evening for the last times.

The new bill at Edwards' Theater Comique is proving most attractive, and the audiences this week are large and very demonstrative in their expressions of approval.

Gregory's Dime Museum continues to attract very large crowds daily. Che-Mah, the Chinese dwarf, is the current novelty, and with Mme. Naomi, the Adams sisters and the other wonders affords food for the curiously inclined.

CHERUB.

Jefferson All Right.

Regarding the comedian's reappearance Monday evening in Cincinnati the Enquirer says: "Depending on the managerial assurances that Mr. Jefferson would be able to play last night, notwithstanding the hoarseness which compelled him to cancel his professional engagements last week, a large audience assembled at the Grand Opera House last night. There was no disappointment. Mr. Jefferson, though it may have cost him an unusual effort to play, so well concealed any affliction of voice there might have been that no one would have suspected any trouble if he had not read the papers. It is almost enough to say that Mr. Jefferson gave a very fine impersonation of Fighting Bob Acres in Sheridan's comedy, "The Rivals."

Haverly's Enterprise.

A Philadelphia dispatch to the Enquirer says: "It is announced that J. R. Haverly intends to locate a theater at Atlantic City, either by building on a suitable plat of ground or by purchasing the Ocean Pier, which extends 2,000 feet into the sea, built of wood and iron, has a seating capacity of 5,000, and is illuminated with gas and electric lights. The price asked for it is $23,000, $10,000 of which would be paid in cash and the balance in thirty, sixty and ninety-day notes. Haverly, it is understood, is willing to give $20,000 for the place. Mr. Charles M. Southwell, Mr. Haverly's Philadelphia manager, said: 'It is Mr. Haverly's intention to build a theater at Atlantic City, and if he cannot have one for this season he will have one for next, and it will be on the style of the New York Casino, and used only for light opera.'"

Stage Splinters.

Ed Varrey is another of the survivors of the original "American Cousin" cast, who was omitted in the reference a day or two ago.

Mr. Florence's character in "Facts," is designated by the historical name of "Perkins." It is not Eli, however, but probably one of the same family.

The musical act at the People's this week, done by Wood, Beasley and the Weston brothers, is perhaps the best thing of its kind ever done here, and is a clever exhibition of musical versatility.

Sol Smith Russell, one of the most quiet and clerical men off the stage, is very popular in social life. He and Dan Dougherty are the only persons honored with honorary memberships to the Philadelphia Press Club.

Joaquin Miller is credited with this characteristic remark: "I think Irving is a great and good man, of course, but he is immensely overrated. I tried to get him to do my 'Danites' in London, but he wouldn't."

"Who is that?" asked a gentleman as Legrand White stepped out of Mr. Pope's office one day last week. "What does he do?" was the next question. "He is his wife's manager," was the reply. "He is a dashed sight more than a good many I could name," was the response.

"The Black Crook" which comes to Pope's next week is not the shabby, tawdry affair with which theater-goers have been regaled for the past season or two. The scenery and costumes are all new, and there are new ballets and specialties introduced in the popular old spectacle.

Bartley Campbell's "Siberia" has proven one of the most successful of late dramatic spectacles, and will draw an immense business to the Olympic next week. In addition to a grand series of scenes and tableaux, there is a most interesting story connected with the piece which increases its attractiveness.

"Three of a Kind" is the title of the new piece which the Troubadours will produce to-morrow evening at Pope's. It treats of the woes experienced by summer boarders at a model farmhouse, and this betafic theme will be taken full advantage of by Nat Salsbury, John Webster and Miss McHenry.

Charles Frohman says in an interview: "On the whole, I think public taste is changing back to quiet plays again. We have for seven or eight weeks been playing 'Hazel Kirk' and 'Esmeralda' against the strong melodramatic attractions like 'Monte Cristo' and 'Romany Rye,' and I have kept watch over the results. I think the heavy melodrama craze is about finished, and I am now going to keep my eye out for light material."

Messrs. Robson and Crane's new play is a travesty on the melodramatic line of plays. Crane plays the part of a murderer, who places the body of his victim in a trunk. The trunk is checked along with the rest of the baggage, and gets lost. Mr. Crane starts in terrified pursuit of the trunk, and Mr. Robson, as a detective, starts in hot pursuit of Mr. Crane. It finally transpires that the man is not killed, and the piece ends at that.

To the Readers of the Post-Dispatch.

As most of our readers are already aware, the Globe Clothing Company of 714 Franklin avenue, have leased the adjoining property, 717 Franklin avenue, and intend to unite the two stores into one. As it is the intention of the management to open their new establishment with an entirely new stock, they have, prior to rebuilding, made a sweeping reduction of from 25 to 50 per cent on their entire stock, comprising suits and overcoats for men and boys amounting to $100,000. We would advise all our readers to take advantage of this great reduction sale, as we are satisfied that such opportunities to buy clothing at such ridiculous prices do not occur very often.

The Leading Art Dealers.

Redheffer & Koch, 1000 Olive street. Open this month until 9 p. m.

The Municipal Assembly.

At the meeting of the Council last evening, a petition with 6,000 signatures praying for the passage of the water-gas bill pending was presented by Mr. Rowse. Mr. Stone introduced a bill leasing the Forest Park restaurant to W. U. Belt for six years at $1,200 per year. The report of the committee recommending the confirmation of E. W. Reaser as Assistant City Attorney was laid over indefinitely. The session was taken up in clearing off routine matter from the desk.

In the House of Delegates the elevated railroad bill, after extended amendment, was again recommended to the Committee on Public Improvement, with instructions to report on Friday night. A bill was introduced repealing the wine and beer license clause of the dramshop law. A proposition to appoint a committee of thee to investigate the insinuation that some members of the House had been bribed in the interest of the elevated railroad was laid upon the table. A committee was appointed to consider the propriety of removing the market house at Twentieth and Wash streets. The general street railroad bill was reported from the Council and read a first time.

No Competition on These Prices.

Men's fine heavy all wool cassimere and cheviot overcoats and ulsterettes, former price $12 50 and $15: must go at $10 during our great reduction sale this week prior to rebuilding, at the Brass.

Just at present Brasses are all the rage in the East; in fact, brass ornaments in household decorations are a perfect craze. Simmons Hardware Company have just received a beautiful line of brass goods, such as fire sets, andirons, fenders, umbrella stands, coal hods, etc., which they offer at exceedingly low prices.

Missouri Matters.

TROY, December 5.—The Gibson murder trial has been postponed until the 8th of January, because of the finding of a new indictment by the Grand Jury, holding Mrs. Wilkinson as an accessory.

LEXINGTON, December 5.—John Poole, who was once arrested on complaint of John P. Herr, as a member of the James gang, was allowed $1 in his damage suit against Herr yesterday.

INDEPENDENCE, December 5.—While hunting yesterday, Bud Cline was accidentally shot in the head and the hands.

MARSHALL, December 5.—Harry Johnson, a 9-year old boy, was operated on by surgeons yesterday, and a grain of corn taken out of his throat. The corn had lodged above the larynx only five minutes before the operation was performed.

SPRINGFIELD, December 5.—Mrs. Lizzie Lynch committed suicide yesterday by taking morphine.

COUGHS, Colds and Sore-Throat yield readily to B. H. Douglass & Son's Capsicum Cough Drops.

The Iowa Pool.

NEW YORK, December 5.—Mr. Clark of the Union Pacific Railroad and Mr. Cabel of the Rock Island Road deny that their roads "tacitly agreed" with the Milwaukee and St. Paul Road to withdraw from the Iowa pool. They say their visit to New York at this time was purely one of general business, and they had not come to meet Mr. Merrill of the St. Paul Road, or sign any agreement of the nature indicated. Being here at the same time was simply a coincidence.

DOCTOR WHITTIER

617 St. Charles Street, St. Louis, Mo.

A regular graduate of two medical colleges, has been longer engaged in the treatment of Chronic, Nervous, Skin and Blood Diseases than any other physician in St. Louis, as city papers show and all old residents know. Consultation at office or by mail free and invited. A friendly talk or opinion costs nothing. When it is inconvenient to visit the city for treatment medicine can be sent by mail or express everywhere. Curable cases guaranteed; where doubt exists it is frankly stated. Hours 8 a. m. to 8 p. m.

Nervous Prostration, Debility, Mental and Physical Weakness, Mercurial and other Affections of Throat, Skin or Bones, Blood Impurities and Poisoning, Skin Affections, Old Sores, Ulcers, Impediments to Marriage, Rheumatism, Piles. Especial attention to cases from over-worked brain and Surgical Cases.

Diseases arising from Indiscretion, Excess, Exposure or Indulgence, producing some of the following effects: Nervousness, Debility, Dimness of Sight or Perverted Vision, Defective Memory, Pimples on the Face, Aversion to Society of Females, Unfitness to Marry, Melancholy, Dyspepsia, Restlessness, Loss of Spirits, Pains in the Back, etc., are treated with unparalleled success. Treatment without hindrance to business, safe, sure and permanent. Sent everywhere by mail or express. 8 to 8.

It is self-evident that a physician paying attention to a class of cases attains great skill, every known appliance is resorted to, and the proved good remedies of all ages are used. A whole house for office purposes, and all are treated skilfully. Knowing what to do, no experiments are made.

THE FLOWER MISSION.

Preparations for the Christmas Charities—The Hospitals.

The ladies of the Flower Mission met this morning at the Presbyterian Publication Rooms, on Eleventh and Olive streets. The ladies who were present discussed the best method of distributing the Christmas charities of the Mission among the hospitals. Bags of candy were suggested for the Children's Hospital. "And do you want me to buy the bags?" queried Mrs. Barnard, in a soft voice, anxious to know the wish of the ladies.

"Couldn't we beg them?" asked a lady who was busily engaged in putting a delicate picture card into a cream-colored envelope.

"Possibly so," answered a voice; "and as to printing the envelopes and cards, I think I can get that done—possibly this week," the lady replied, somewhat affirmatively.

Among the gifts received towards the Christmas charities, were ten pounds of candy from Blank & Co.; thirty elegant picture cards by Mrs. Krum; 500 envelopes from "a friend"; and a number of German magazines from Mrs. Ballard. The ladies will meet for the final adjustment of their plans on the 21st and the hospitals will be visited on the 24th. The Poor House will also be visited on the same date. Mrs. Barnard speaks in high terms of the gratitude of Poor House inmates. The ladies of the mission, finding their funds insufficient to supply the hospitals with Christmas fruit supplies, desire the POST-DISPATCH readers to financially assist them in the enterprise; all contributions towards this subject to be sent either to Dr. Allen of the Presbyterian Publication Rooms or the POST-DISPATCH. The poor and the suffering, especially the hospital sufferers, make a demand upon our generosity at such a time, which it is hard to withstand, and the generous efforts constantly put forth by the ladies of the Flower Mission for the general good, should be practically indorsed by the public.

Diamonds.

I have the largest assortment of diamonds in the city, mounted in the finest gold, consisting of solitaires and clusters, in ear-rings, lace-pins, studs, collar buttons, sleeve buttons, and bracelets, etc. Come and see my stock of diamonds. I will give you a bargain.

B. WALKER,
219 North Fourth street.

IN THE CITY.

Some Missourians Who were Found in the Hotel Corridors.

Fine Farr, the handsome private secretary of the handsome Governor of Missouri, is in the city, but to a POST-DISPATCH reporter he exhibited much coyness and would say nothing regarding his mission. Secretary of State McGrath is also in the city, and he is uncommunicative, which would lead one to believe that the Grand Jury has undertaken an investigation of the mystery surrounding the miscarriage of the requisition upon the Governor of Massachusetts for Pickard, the lottery tea store man, whose testimony against Ed. Butler, it is said, would have proved valuable.

J. Ed. Jones, editor of the Plattsburg Lever, formerly Mr. Michael's prohibition organ, is in the city, on his way to Texas. He goes South in single blessedness. There is a rumor that he will not return in that condition. He admits that the prohibitionists throughout the State are making a very active and aggressive canvass. As part of the programme, C. J. Corwin's prohibition paper, the New Age, formerly published at Sedalia and now at Windsor, Henry County, is to be removed to St. Louis, and, backed by plenty of capital, is to wage a vigorous warfare in behalf of the cause of which it is the organ.

Will M. Zevely, Deputy Commissioner of Labor Statistics, is in the city. He says that Henry Newman, the Commissioner, is hard at work upon his first annual report, which will be submitted to the Governor before January 5, 1884. It will deal mainly with the questions of convict labor, the condition of the mines of the State, and will treat at length upon the subject of the compensation and social condition of railroad employes. The matters of the general condition of labor in Missouri and child-labor will be reserved for the second report.

Big Bargain

In a pair of diamond ear-rings; pure gems and perfect, 6-karat. Also one pair 4¾-karat.

B. WALKER, 219 N. Fourth street.

A Slick Swindler Caught.

The Merchants' Detective Association of this city has effected the arrest at New Orleans of a slick swindler who has been operating in various places under many aliases, and in devious ways. His last name is Charles G. Jacobs, but he has a large number of aliases. He began operations at Kalamazoo, Mich., where he forged a note for a large amount, and has since been forging, raising checks, misrepresenting himself, making drafts and working other confidence games. He produces letters of credit from Pinkerton, has claimed in several places that he was Pinkerton himself, and said he was commissioned by the Detective Association of this city. This put Mr. Cole on his track, and he was arrested at New Orleans. The Sheriff of Kalamazoo took him in hand to answer the charges against him at that place.

Into an Open Draw.

CLEVELAND, OHIO, December 5.—Before daylight this morning a Bee Line locomotive, backing o flats, plunged through an open draw into the river, and Amon Chew, the engineer, was drowned. George Whitmarsh, the fireman, jumped to the dock and escaped. The accident is supposed to have been caused by the engineer not observing the signal lights on the bridge, which had swung to let a steam barge pass. The fireman was oiling the engine. Chew leaves a family. He had been in the company's employ twenty years.

The Bells of Lynn.

When the eve is growing gray, and the tide is rolling in,
I sit and look across the bay to the bonny town of Lynn;
And thefisher folk are near,
But I wis they never hear
The songs the far bells make for me, the bonny bells of Lynn.

The folks are chatting gay, and I hear thei merry din,
But I look across the bay to the bonny town of Lynn;
He told me to wait here
Upon the old brown pier,
To wait and watch him coming when the tide was rolling in.

Oh, I see him pulling strong, pulling o'er the bay to me'
And I hear his jovial song, and his merry face I see;
And now he's at the pier,
My bonny love and dear!
And he's coming up the sea-washed steps with hands outstretched to me.

O my love, your cheek is cold, and your hands are stark and thin;
Oh, hear you not the bells of old, the bonny bells of Lynnn?
Oh, have you nought to say
Upon our wedding day?
Love, hear you not the wedding bells across the Bay of Lynn?

O my lover, speak to me! and hold me fast mine own!
For I fear the rising sea, and these winds and waves that moan!

But never a word he said!
He is dead, my love is dead!
Ah me! ah me! I did but dream; and I am all alone—
Alone, and old, and gray; and the tide is rolling in;
But my heart's away, away, away, in the old graveyard at Lynn!

O'NEILL SECURED.

The St. Louis Club Safe on Their Batteries for '84.

The Lucas-Wainwright Catcher, Who is He?—Interesting Gossip From New York—General Sporting Chit Chat.

Official notification has been received by the several clubs belonging to the League Association and Northwestern Association that James O'Neill's contract with the St. Louis Club has been received by Secretary Williams and duly approved, and this settles that player's status for the season of '84. As Mullane's successor a comparison between the two will be very interesting, and it is certain that O'Neill will be a very worthy successor to Tony so far as twirling and batting is concerned. Tony in the list of American Association pitchers stood number eleven in the fielding records, playing in fifty games, having 166 chances offered and a percentage of .889 accepted. O'Neill stands last in a list of seventeen League pitchers as regards fielding, but has a much better showing as regards his effectiveness in pitching in six games. His opponents went 589 times to the bat, making 168 hits—a general average of 285; his standing beating that of Burns of Detroit, Coleman and Hogan of Philadelphia, and being within three points of Goldsmith of Chicago, and within sixteen points of Weidman of Detroit. Considering theirs is based upon sixteen games played, the showing is an excellent one, and O'Neill was in very good company. As for batting, Mullane's average was .231, he standing forty-fifth in list of eighty-eight averages; O'Neill's average was 178, he being sixty-ninth in a list of seventy-six. As a young player and one who is constantly improving O'Neill will undoubtedly give great strength to the St. Louis force next season, and his engagement was a very clever piece of diplomacy on the part of Manager Williams. As has been intimated, while O'Neil does not fill such a general field as does Mullane the St. Louis force will be sufficiently comprehensive next season to restrict his services to the pitcher's box. With three good catchers and four pitchers, the battery corps of the St. Louis club should be in excellent shape all the coming season.

The Lucas-Wainwright Catcher.

Regarding the catcher, who is as yet an "unknown," but whom the Lucas management claim to have secured, nothing new or startling has as yet developed. One of the well-posted attaches of the club remarked, however, a day or two ago, "He is the man who led the batting averages of all the League catchers last year, and he is a dandy." Now this description applies to Gross, of the Philadelphias, and if he is the man he will prove a serviceable addition to the force. On the other hand, the New York correspondent of the Sporting Life indulges in the following interesting gossip:

"The manager of the new St. Louis (Lucas) Club is again looking for New York players. He has entered into negotiations with William Ewing, the catcher of the New York Club. The latter is one of the best catchers in the country, and last season he commanded the highest salary paid any ball player, receiving $3,200 for his work. His salary has been lowered somewhat, but officers of the New York League Club say that Ewing has too much sense to break his contract with the New York club and accept an engagement with an organization that cannot afford to pay him the sum he receives in New York. Besides this, by leaving the New York Club he would be debarred from playing in clubs of any of the recognized associations. This would naturally make Ewing remain where he is, even if the St. Louis manager promised him a much larger salary than that now given. A member of the New York team, a friend of Ewing, said, in speaking of the matter: 'When you catch Ewing asleep you will know it. He uses more judgment in making out his contracts than any other player in the League, and, in business matters, he is more like a banker than a ball player. You can depend on it, if Ewing plays at all next year, it will be as a member of the New York club.' Another well-known ball player thinks that the men signing with the St. Louis club are doing it for the advance money they will receive, and that they will refuse to play there when the season opens, as was the case with several American Associations clubs last year.

The Metropolitans' New Grounds.

The Metropolitan Club will no longer play on the Polo grounds. Two clubs playing on the same grounds last season proved to be unsatisfactory to the visiting clubs, and the result was that the American Association requested the managers of the Metropolitan team to find an inclosed ground elsewhere. A suitable place has been found in the plot of ground bounded by One Hundred and Seventh and One Hundred and Ninth streets, and First avenue and the East River. Manager Mutrie has decided to begin the work of filling in the ground, and inclosing it at once. On the 27th the Board of Aldermen passed a resolution allowing him the privilege of closing up One Hundred and Eighth street from First avenue to the river. A lease of the place for a term of five years has been granted the Metropolitan stockholders. The grounds selected are very suitable for playing, but are not adjacent to the different elevated railroads like the Polo Grounds. They can be reached conveniently, however, by the Second avenue road, which has stations at One Hundred and Fifth and One Hundred and Eleventh streets. Manager Mutrie says he has a winning nine, and that they will draw if they played in Astoria.—[Sporting Life.

A New Athletic Club.

St. Louis has been wofully behind the times and her sister cities in the matter of Athletics and their encouragement locally, and it is a matter of congratulation that another effort, and a vigorous one, will be made to put them on a substantial footing.

On the 12th inst a meeting of the Modoc Rowing Club will be held at the Missouri Gymnasium, and its chief object will be the organization of an athletic club. With such spirits as John A. St. John at its head and an important membership roll to open with, its success is well nigh assured. The chief difficulty in the past has been the lack of a ground and of facilities and this trouble has been overcome to an important extent, as the new Lucas grounds will be placed at the disposal of the Athletic Club, when organized, and a good cinder track laid for its use.

Now, it should be stated in this connection that, although the new Athletic Club will be organized under the auspices of the Modoc Rowing Club, it will be by no means compulsory for any gentleman desiring to become a member to join the latter organization. All wishing to give the matter a helping hand and shoulder are respectfully invited to be present at the Missouri Gymnasium on the evening of Wednesday, December 12, at 8 p. m.

The Thistles.

The Thistle Football Club had their monthly meeting last night. It was a large and enthusiastic one. Ten new members were admitted. M. P. McGuffie was elected to the post of vice-captain of first eleven. The selection of a team to represent the club in its match with the Irish-American Athletics next Sunday, was made the subject of prayerful consideration and a satisfactory result was finally reached, which will be made public in a day or two.

All reports to the contrary, there will be no Union club in Cincinnati. This may be depended upon.

The Board of Directors of the Sportsman's Park will meet at President Von der Ahe's this evening.

Kappell and Landis are secured for the new Baltimore Union team. Landis pitched for Baltimore in '82.

A Boston paper says that Mr. Lucas offered Morrill of the Bostons $3,600 to manage and play with his nine.

The Gore combination beat the Cincinnati combination at New Orleans on Sunday by a score of 4 to 3. Six hits were made off Hecker and four off Deagle.

Manager Simmons of the champion Athletics is whacking the tambourine with a troupe of burnt corkonians. There is not much dignity about Lew, but a "hole passel" of thrift.

The Cleveland club has secured James E. McGuire as change catcher. He began to play ball in Cleveland, and was last season connected with the Terre Haute club. He is 21 years of age, and a good pitcher.

Veteran base-ball players are growing in number as the years go by. Those over 35 years of age certainly belong in this class, and include Ferguson, Start, Nelson, Eggler, White, York, Sutton, Burdock, Mathews, Fulmer and Cuthbert.

Mr. Clifton Bell's horses have left St. Louis for Colorado in charge of Charles Pleasant. Dave Yandell, Harry Gilmore and McGinty, are the most prominent winners of this stable, and may be expected to be heard from another season very creditably.

It is stated by a well-known oarsman of Pittsburg, Pa., that the recent challenge of John Teemer, of McKeesport, to Edward Hanlan was the result of a Chicago man daring Teemer to issue the challenge and offering to bet $50 that Teemer would not defy the champion. The McKeesport sculler won the stakes, and would have made the match at once had Hanlan decided to wait and sign articles.

An exchange says: "Charles E. Courtney, the sculler, thinks of writing a book on the Lachine and other rowing campaigns, which will stir up a breeze and expose several prominent citizens, oarsmen and newspaper men." If Courtney was to write all he knows about Courtney it would create some little interest, but very little surprise. These efforts to besmirch Hanlan's reputation should be given a rest.

The players of the Chicago Club now under engagement are: Anson, Goldsmith, Burns, Kelly, Flint, Williamson, Pfeiffer, Gore, Dalrymple and Sunday, all of the team of 1883, and Crosby, Dee, Young, Dinnan, Whitely, Depangier and Kinzie. Corcoran wants $4,000 and the managers don't think him worth it. He is reserved, but has not signed the contract. It is possible he will get what he wants from the Lucas Club.

The following players have signed with the Chicago and Baltimore Union Association Clubs: J. J. Ellick of Springfield, E. J. Hengle, Charles Cady, N. N. Schoeneck and Frank Mienker of Chicago, Charles Levis, E. D. Sullivan, William Colgan and Robert E. Hogan of St. Louis, Thos. Gunning and W. H. Robinson of Natic, Mass., W. F. Kreig of Dayton, G. B. Pickney and R. Phelan of Peoria, W. J. Sweeney and Ed Fusselbach of Philadelphia, Ed C. Kent of New York, J. B. McSorley of Council Bluffs, C. F. Householder of Harrisburg, S. A. Behel of Rockford, Charles Seery of Elgin, L. N. Sylvester of Waltham, Mass., and C. McFarland of Fall River, Mass. Many of these, it will be seen, are men reserved by Northwestern League Clubs.

The Uses of Advertising.

ST. LOUIS, December 5, 1883.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

Inclosed please find check in payment of advertising bill. Permit us to say to you, that we hear from advertisements of the St. Louis Short-hand Institute, in the POST-DISPATCH, from the most unexpected places. For instance, we receive inquiries from cities numbering from seventy-five to one hundred thousand inhabitants, at a distance from St. Lonis, stating that they saw the advertisement of the St. Louis Short-hand Institute in the POST-DISPATCH. This is remarkable in our experience in advertising, and we think it worthy of notice. Respectfully yours,

An Elk Presentation.

A committee of the Elks' Lodge, consisting of Messrs. John W. Norton, P. S. O'Reilly and John R. Reavis, issued a number of invitations yesterday to members of the lodge requesting them to be present at the club rooms last evening to participate in the presentation of a testimonial to Henry W. Moore, the secretary of the lodge. Pursuant to this call, Messrs. Edwin Harrison, Col. D. P. Slattery, Dr. H. J. McKellops, John W. Norton, John R. Reavis, Pat Short, Charles E. Ware, Charles F. Joy, F. M. Coulter, E. R. Norris, D. R. Francis, Ellis Wainwright, Frederick Schmieding, A. B. Ewing, Dr. P. S. O'Reilly, W. H. Swift, W. C. Yocum, Gus Ewing, and a number of other gentlemen assembled at the Elks' Club Rooms. Mr. Moore was called in, and Dr. P. S. O'Reilly on, behalf of the members of the lodge, made the presentation speech. He alluded to the chaotic condition in which Mr. Moore had found the books and records of the lodge when he first assumed the duties of secretary, and how by hard labor and skillful management he had righted them and aided materially in bringing the lodge to its present high standing and prosperous condition. It was now the banner lodge of the country and the members desired to show their appreciation of Mr. Moore's labors. He then presented him with the testimonial, a handsome gold watch and chain. Mr. Moore made a brief response, thanking the members for their kind remembrance. Other speeches were made by John W. Norton, Chas. F. Joy, Judge Noonan and Chas. E. Ware. An informal collation was spread, and the entire party spent a thoroughly pleasant and enjoyable evening. About 11 o'clock Mr. Lytton Sothern, accompanied by Mr. Horace Wall, his manager, came in to extend their congratulations to Mr. Moore.

The testimonial is a magnificent gold watch and chain from the E. Jaccard Jewelry Company. Mr. Moore's monogram is handsomely engraved on the front outer case, and on the inner side of the back is the inscription: "Presented to H. W. Moore, Secretary Lodge No. 9, B. P. O. E., by Brother Elks."

Patrick Kelly swore out warrants against Wm. Gamble and F. W. Walsh, in Squire Draggon's Court this morning, charging them with assault with intent to kill. A few nights since the two men entered Kelly's saloon on the Island and commenced quarreling. Kelly and Walsh rolled about the floor in a scuffle, during which Kelly chewed off a portion of Walsh's ear. Walsh produced his revolver and Gamble drew a large knife, with which he threatened to kill Kelly. After the difficulty was settled Walsh swore out a warrant against Kelly for mayhem, and in order to make things even Kelly accused Walsh with assault to rob and kill. The preliminary examinations will be held Friday, unless a compromise is effected.

There was a meeting of the executive committee of the Mexican Commercial Exchange last night. All bills incurred during the recent visit of the Chihuahuans were paid from the citizens' subscription fund. A resolution of thanks was tendered the following gentlemen: S. H. Laflin, George A. Banantine, Augustus Pullis, James F. Coyle and Isaac Cook. It was owing mainly to the efforts of these gentlemen that the stay of the Mexicans in the city was rendered so pleasurable. Resolutions of thanks were also tendered the superintendents of the various roads who had accorded the visitors the privileges of their lines. Letters of thanks were received from the Governor and Lieutenant-Governor of Chihuahua.

WHERE there is a weakness of the throat or lungs, a cold neglected may be all that is required to establish a lingering and generally fatal disease. Even where there is no special tendency to bronchial or pulmonary trouble, a severy cold, left to take care of itself, often plants the seeds of a serious complaint, sure to be developed by subsequent indiscretions. Take especial care of your health, therefore, from the very earliest symptoms of a cough or cold, by prudently resorting to Dr. Jayne's Expectorant, which will soothe and strengthen the bronchial tubes, allay inflammation and cleanse them and the lungs of all irritating substances. An ounce of prevention is better than a pound of cure.

CADY'S COURT.

A Depravity Which Cropped Out in a Case This Morning.

A Bad Man Wearing a Bad Name Comes to Grief Before the Police Tribunal To-day.

Charles Curran, an intelligent looking young man, was arraigned in the First District Police Court this morning on a charge of being an inmate of a disreputable house. The testimony developed a case of humble depravity. The officers testified that Curran had been an inmate of a house of ill-fame at No. 311 South Sixth street for several weeks, eating at the same table with the female inmates and acting as a bouncer in part payment for his board and lodging. After hearing the testimony offered by the city, Judge Cady informed the defendant that he had a right to take the stand as a witness in his own behalf or to make any statement he might see fit as a defense to the charge. "Well, I've got nothing to say," replied the defendant. I am out of work and out of money. I can't sleep on the streets, or I'll be arrested for vagrancy. What shall I do?"

"You should stay away from houses of ill repute, for one thing," said Judge Cady, in answer to the question.

"Well," continued the defendant, "my sister lives in that house, and I had no place else to go except there, and that is all I've got to say about it."

"I'll fine you $50," said the Court, "In other words—six months," rejoined the defendant, who, as he walked back to the dock, exclaimed, "Hi-ho-hum-harry—hurrah!"

In the full meaning of the word James Slug, an appropriately named police court defendant, is a "tough." He is one of that kind of toughs who drops into a barber's chair and orders the tonsorial artist to "shave up dem loose hairs on de back o' mi neck." This swaggering gentleman will pass current nearly any place for a real bad man, as he has all the indications. He wears tight-legged jeans pants with ten-inch diameter bells, while his coat and vest are bound with three-quarter-inch braid, and his head is covered with a soft hat, which he carefully indents before donning. His gait is a cross between that of a prize fighter and a man suffering from locomotor ataxy. These were the symptoms up to yesterday, when he met a little man whom he failed to impress with the usual amount of fear, and in the scuffle which ensued Mr. Slug was badly worsted by the little man. While he was trying to staunch the copious flow of blood from his proboscis, an officer happened along and arrested him for disturbing the peace. The little man disappeared and escaped arrest by that wise precaution. When Slug was arraigned before Judge Cady to-day, it was evident that a good deal of starch had been taken out of him, but he would still impress a mild-mannered citizen as a dangerous man to treat lightly. The arresting officer gave an account of the arrest, and how the defendant provoked a street fight. Slug gave the following statement, which should be accompanied with a glossary of slang: "I met dis feller last night and he was boozy and insultin. I told him I wouldn't have none of his lip, and he showed fight. I didn't want to git into a scrap and git collared, and I started away, when, de first thing I knew, he banged me in the jaw and knocked me stiff. Of course I defended myself, and den de officer came along and collared me."

"Who spoke first," asked the City Attorney.

"I did. I asked him, 'How do you do?' just like any gentleman would ask another, and he says: 'I am well, but its none o' your d—d business how I am.' Den de trouble started."

Mr. Slug seemed unwilling to perjure himself, but he got over testifying against himself by leaving blanks in the story of the altercation. Judge Cady saw through the story, and after a brief lecture on the littleness of a thumper's ambition, he assessed a fine of $10 against the bad man who bore the bad name.

James Green, an idler and vagrant was fined $500 and given forty-eight hours to leave town.

QUEER SMUGGLING.

Vicar Muhlsiepen—Some Sisters Named in Connection With the Affair.

The following telegram will attract attention throughout the city, because the reverend gentleman mentioned in it is well-known to Catholics generally on account of the position which he holds. The dispatch reads as follows:

NEW YORK, December 5.] Among the passengers who arrived on the steamship Waesland from Antwerp yesterday, were the Very Rev. H. Muehlsiepen, vicar general of the Catholic Archdiocese of St. Louis, Sisters A. Volck and Seraphine and eight novices. The latter were in charge of Sister Schweiniga, and were on their way to

A CONVENT AT ST. LOUIS.

They declared to the customs officers a number of dutiable articles which they had brought with them. Subsequently the officers connected with the special Treasury Agent's Office directed that the novices should be searched, and they were ushered into the customs office, on the wharf at the foot of Grand street for the purpose. The search was made by Inspectors Jennie Farris and Alice Kearney.

THEY FOUND CONCEALED

on the person of Sister Schweiniga and Misses Paronella Seifika, Clara Tauber, Maria Baumann, Cecilia Huber, Bridget Keifer and Selina Bockel quantities of sewing silk, bullion, and silk for making the finest vestments. Some of the articles were sewed in skirts. Those taken from Sister Schweiniga weighed fourteen pounds. The goods were sent to the seizure room. They are valued at several hundred dollars.

THE EXPLANATION GIVEN HERE.

A POST-DISPATCH reporter called upon some prominent Catholic clergymen to-day, and from them the following additional particulars were learned: Vicar-General Muehlsiepen has been in Europe several months. While there he visited Paderborn in Prussia, his native city, from which place the women mentioned in the telegram came. "They are not sisters," said a Catholic priest today. "They are in no sense what we call religious. For instance, they take few if any vows. They are a band of nurses, and are really no more than servant girls. The association originated in Paderborn. Some years ago Father Muhlsiepen built a house for them down at his church, St. Mary's. The real name of the association is the 'Nursing Women of—I forget the word, but it was such a long, outlandish German name that, when some of the women came here, they changed it to "The Sisters of St. Mary," from the church near where they are located. They are really, however, no more Sisters, in the religious sense, than you or I. They go out and nurse, living in the houses where they work, with no obligation to go back to their central place. They come and go as they please. These ladies came over with Father Muhlsiepen as an addition to the community now here. As I tell you, they are really servant girls. They have caused considerable gossip by the way they act. The priests in this city have always been opposed to them, because they wear a religious habit, and yet go around and act in a way that does not look well in the eyes of strangers who suppose them to be religious. I've seen one of them with habit and bonnet on, driving an old plug and a wagon down Fifth street. I've met them gazing and gadding on the street, like all other green girls, which is all they are. They cause great annoyance to the Sisters of Mercy, of Charity, Sisters of the Visitation and all other ladies, because some Catholics think all women who wear habits are sisters alike. The explanation, I suppose, is that these green German girls fooled Father Muhlsiepen as they tried to fool the custom officers. I know that he would not take such a risk, even if he would stoop to smuggling, for the small amount of duty charged on such articles."

Father Muhlsiepen telegraphed Father Van der Sanden, the Vicar General, that he would leave New York for St. Louis last night. This matter will probably delay him, however.

Herbert's Cafe.

Col. C. W. Herbert, whose management of the Forest Park restaurant has earned for him a record as a prince of caterers, will throw open to the public to-morrow the handsomest and most sumptuous cafe, with private supper and dining-rooms attached, ever established in the West. In opening the splendid establishment at 113 North Eighth street, Mr. Herbert, to use a hackneyed expression, will "fill a long felt want." The building, three stories in height, is entirely new and of a most attractive style of architecture, the exterior filling the eye pleasantly. One the ground floor, the largest and best equiped wine and sample room in the city, with the public cafe in the rear, are found. The appointments are superb. In the rear of the premises, a handsome summer garden will prove a popular feature. The second and third floors each contain four elegantly furnished dining parlors, separated by wide, tastefully decorated halls. Each splendid apartment is complete in itself, yet the whole floor can be thrown together. The entrance to this department is by a wide, private stair-case. The place has been fitted up in a lavish style of splendor, and St. Louis has at last a first-class resort for public and private dinner parties. The formal opening takes place to-morrow, and is purely an invitation affair, very handsome souvenirs of the occasion having been sent out by Col. Herbert.

THE RAGE FOR ODDITY.

How it is Met by the Novelties in Ladies' Ornaments.

The quality of uniqueness or oddness is considered very desirable in all articles of personal ornament; in fact, it must supplement mere prettiness to have any article become popular. In all the brilliant array of magnificent goods that greeted the eyes of the throng at the Mermod & Jaccard Jewelry Company's opening last night, at Fourth and Locust, there was one little group that attracted the attention of a POST-DISPATCH reporter who was present. It was a collection of ladies' breastpins, but so entirely new and odd in design as to be very interesting, and the pins were not only odd, but exquisitely beautiful in material and workmanship. Cats' eyes, rubies, sapphires, pearls, emeralds, diamonds and other stones were used in their make up. There was for instance, a very dainty little design of a silver and gold leaf on which was a spider, the spider being composed of a cat's eye, body, a diamond head and oxidized silver legs. Another lovely pin was shaped like an anchor and dolphin with ruby eye, both fairly crusted with diamonds. Another quaint design is that of a rooster head, another a fox head, shepherd's staff and crook in one gold pin and another an old-fashioned poke bonnet. A perfect novelty was some delicate enamel work on copper. There is not an article in the whole collection that is not exceedingly unique and pretty, and that is not calculated to fill the heart of a fair possessor with delight.

ABOUT DOCTORS.

Incompetent Men and Defective Methods of Education.

A Better Way--Scientific Training and Practical Experience.

As none of us know how soon we may fall into the hands of a doctor, the question of medical education is a matter of common interest—of practical and immediate importance. It is becoming daily more obvious that the qualifications necessary to secure a diploma from the best medical colleges of the country, and a verification or certificate of its genuineness by State boards of health or examiners are not sufficient to properly fit a person for the responsibilities of a physician. The graduate fresh from college usually has but a small stock of that knowledge and experience necessary to success. He has gone through the usual routine of training and passed his examination satisfactorily, but he is lacking in practical experience under the direction of competent teachers, and before he can get that experience for himself under the usual system of practice, it is altogether probable that more than one poor sufferer will fall a victim to his ignorance and incompetence. His diploma, being verified, gives him the privilege of treating all forms of disease, yet there are hundreds of complicated conditions which he has never seen, and which, during a lifetime of ordinary practice, may not come under his notice often enough to give him the experience necessary to even a moderate degree of success. All this proves that there is something radically wrong with the present system of making doctors. Life is too short for one man to learn all there is to be learned in regard to medicine, or to become successful in all departments of practice. The only way to attain the highest degree of success is to devote himself to the study of some particular branch of his profession. Under the regular code of ethics this plan is almost impracticable, and doctors continue to make fatal blunders by endeavoring to practice more than they have ever learned. The Drs. K & K Surgeons have successfully solved the great problem and overcome all these difficulties in their extensive business. In addition to a thorough course in some of the best medical colleges in the country, each one of these surgeons has been trained in his own particular line by practical experience under the direction of skillful specialists. Their experience is not limited to a few isolated conditions as is so often the case with other doctors. They consult with more patients in a month than physicians of ordinary practice see in a year. They meet with and treat every imaginable complication of disease, and the experience thus gained, together with the constant study of their respective specialties, constitutes the natural groundwork of their unparalleled success. There are no incompetents among The Drs. K & K Surgeons, and a position on their staff is both honorable and desirable, as is evidenced by the fact that eminent surgeons, some of whom have been professors in colleges and universities, both in this country and Europe, are almost daily applying for situations.

The Drs. K & K Surgeons' professional staff consists of each one being skilled by practical training and long experience in his own specialties. In addition to the special training, education and practice these doctors have received before being assigned to the responsible positions they now occupy, they are all graduates of first-class medical colleges. Their diplomas show that several of them are graduates of the old and reliable Medical College of Ohio, some from the Medical Department of the University of Michigan, others from the Belleville Medical College of New York, and the remainder from other institutions of unquestioned superiority.

The Drs. K & K Surgeons,

Dr. J. C. Kennedy, principal, have permanent offices at 163 Elm street, Cincinnati, O., and 631 Fourth avenue, Louisville, Ky. These offices are arranged and furnished in the most elegant style and supplied with every modern improvement that science affords for the cure of all diseases and deformities. Twenty-five skilled and experienced surgeons are constantly employed, besides two dentists and a full corps of clerks and correspondents. Four of these surgeons are now at the Everett House, in this city, where they will remain till December 22, giving free consultations to all afflicted persons who call upon them.

Eleven Hundred

And eighty persons have consulted the Drs. K. & K Surgeons at the Everett House, since October 15. Seven hundred and thirteen took treatment, and all but six have greatly improved. They have had many difficult and dangerous cases that have been pronounced incurable by some of the best doctors of the city, yet so far as we can learn not a single one of these has proved fatal.

Three Hundred and Sixty Cures

Have been reported and two hundred more have been so much benefited they expect to be able to report cured before the end of the month.

'Nothing in a Name'

Shakespeare says, but we can't altogether agree with the eminent bard. We don't think a rose would smell half as sweet if it should be reclassified among the flowers as a "cabbage." The plebeian title would detract from its beauty, and we wouldn't feel satisfied with the change. Among our customers some gents insist that pantaloons are "INEXPRESSIBLES," some say "UNMENTIONABLES," some "TROUSERS," others "PANTS." But the fact remains unaltered that they are PANTALOONS, and the FAMOUS is now displaying the largest stock in all-wool fabrics from $3 50 up to $7, ever seen in this city of mud and dust.
